Public Cooperation Needed To Solve Burglary Cases

By GORDON WINTERS

Star Staff Writer

Last year the number of burglaries in Lincoln jumped 30% to a total of 1,187. Property valued at $170,161 was taken.

Most of the burglaries, 704, were of residences.

More than half of the residence burglaries, 376, occurred during June, July and August. Victims of summer burglaries lost property valued at $33,711.

Lincoln police report they solved 26.5% of last year's burglaries, a figure which can be compared with the national average of 16%.

So what can you do about it?

A whole lot, law enforcement officials say.

"Public cooperation is absolutely vital. We can't get along without it," said Merl Hesser, deputy director for regional management of the State Crime Commission.

"The number of crimes cleared, particularly home burglaries due to the public," Hesser said. "You can do a lot of other work, but the best source of information is the public."

19-Year Veteran

Hesser ought to know. Before joining the crime commission he spent 19 years in law enforcement ten and one-half years with the Lincoln police and eight and one-half as the Beatrice Police Chief.

In this part of the country, Hesser said, police get cooperation with "regularity."

"But there is always room for improvement," Hesser said, "particularly if we can inform the public as to what we need."

Acting on that belief, the State Crime Commission has organized an informational program called "Take Time To Check Crime."

Basically the program urges action in three areas:

- Take basic precautions to make your home secure.
- Report suspicious activity in your neighborhood.
- Take measures to insure that you can identify your valuables if they are stolen.

Brochures giving more detailed information are being made available through local law enforcement agencies.

Toll Climbs To 18

Workers Probe Tornado Debris

By The Associated Press

Rescue workers spent Sunday pushing aside debris and slogging through swollen rivers in tornado-ravaged Kansas and Oklahoma, searching for more victims of the storms that struck violently and suddenly.

The latest death toll was set at 18 after officials counted and recounted the dead.

"I'm a veteran of World War II and Korea and I've never seen bombs do that kind of concentrated damage," said Lloyd Rainey, a police lieutenant in Emporia, Kan., where six persons died in Saturday's storms.

The other 12 victims were from Oklahoma, where 13 towns were hit by the storm, which also left hundreds injured and destroyed an estimated $26 million worth of property.

The National Weather Service said the tornadoes were part of a storm system almost as powerful as the one that struck the Midwest on April 3, killing some 300 persons.

Five persons died in Drumright, a community of 3,000 some 43 miles west of Tulsa, and five were killed in the Tulsa area. Two others drowned in floods in northeast Oklahoma 40 to 80 miles east of Tulsa.

The deaths at Tulsa were the first tornado-attributed fatalities in the region in the 60 years that the weather bureau has been keeping records there.

Forecaster Ben Baker said two "pretty good shock waves" moved across the city of Tulsa. We know there were three funnels.

Oklahoma Gov. David Hall flew over the scene of the damage Sunday morning, then toured Drumright, last hit by a severe tornado on April 3, 1966 when five persons died. Hall said the oil town was "one of the most devastated scenes I have viewed." Hall made a formal request to President Nixon that the region be declared a federal disaster area, making it eligible for low-interest loans and other government aid.

Kansas Gov. Robert Docking asked Nixon to declare Lyon County a major disaster area. He requested that the federal government help provide temporary housing for persons whose homes were destroyed by the tornado and unemployment compensation for persons who are out of work because of destruction of businesses.

Almost everyone had a tale of destruction and narrow escape from death. Residents of a Drumright nursing home that had housed 100 persons said only a few people were in the dining hall, hardest hit by the storm.

"I was sitting in my wheelchair in my room and I was getting ready to go to the dining hall," said Martha Stroud, one of the residents. "Just about that time my window blew in and the wall went down. My husband who was visiting here grabbed me and threw me on the bed."

"Great cement blocks were flying. The room was covered with debris. The rain was coming in and I couldn't get out of it."

Another resident, Lawrence Farnsworth added: "The rafters came right down on the tables in the dining hall and there would have been a lot of dead people if the hall was full."

SOBBING... is Ethel Cunningham of Emporia.

The storms that struck at Tulsa and its outskirts damaged a marina, caused major damage to two buildings on the campus of Oral Roberts University and damaged about 80 homes in the $60,000 to $80,000 range.

Officials in both states said more bodies might be found later under piles of rubble.

Five of the dead in Emporia were in a mobile home development on the northwest edge of the city and the sixth victim was found Sunday in a nearby apartment. "The tornado literally tore some of those trailer houses beyond recognition," said Rainey.

Platforms Drawn By Girls Staters

Preparing platform planks and electing officers was the main task of 383 delegates to Cornhusker Girls State Sunday, the second day of the week-long event.

Proposed planks for the Federal Party dealt with equal rights for women, emphasis on rehabilitation in prison reform, restricting beef imports, stricter drug laws, change in the welfare system and improving law enforcement in smaller towns.

One Federal proposal called for the limitation of campaign funds, in order to "give people with smaller funds an equal chance." Another, dealing with the energy crisis, said farmers should have preferential access to gasoline because "farming is a basic industry to Nebraska."

Proposals supporting the use of thermonuclear energy for domestic issues and increased allocation of funds for solar energy research rounded out the Federal resolutions.

The National party planks included support of farm price aid, penal reform, existing speed limits and a stricter enforcement of pollution laws. The expansion of high school girls' sports programs and having a practical application of government in schools also were suggested.

Platform committees for both parties will present the proposals to their members for approval Monday.

In Federal elections, Mary Mahula of North Platte was selected party chairman. Other officers are Debby Giles of Omaha, vice chairman; Jeanne Allison of Plainville, secretary, and Shelly Menolascino of Omaha, treasurer.

Deborah Marion of Omaha was elected chairman of the National Party. Shelly Ball of Bertrand was named vice-chairman, while Rhonda Hawthorne of Palmer and Mary Elworth of Plattsmouth were elected secretary and treasurer.

In a joint session with Cornhusker Boys State, Girls State delegates were to hear an address by Gov. J. J. Exon Sunday night.

Candidates In Primary Chosen At Boys State

Four-hundred Boys Staters met Sunday at the University of Nebraska — Lincoln and elected candidates in their primary election for state offices.

Mark Huska, Nationalist Party candidate from Ulysses will face Mike Rice, Federal Party candidate from Columbus for the lieutenant governor's post. Primary election candidates for governor will be chosen Monday.

As part of the activities Gov. J. James Exon spoke to the boys in the evening and then was asked if he was using the governor's chair as a "stepping stone" to a possible Senate seat. But Exon replied that he had no intention of seeking a Senate seat either in 1976 or 1978.

Cornhusker Boys' State 1974 will end Friday with the inauguration of the governor.

Other primary election candidates are marked with (N) for Nationalist Party and (F) for Federal Party and are:

End To Speed Hassle In Sight?

By BOB GUENTHER

Star Staff Writer

A solution to the legal hassle over the 55 m.p.h. speed limit in Banner County appears to be in sight.

Atty. Gen. Clarence A. H. Meyer said in a recent interview that Banner County Attorney Robert Simmons Jr. has promised to file the next case involving a speeder charged with going faster than 55 m.p.h. but within the state's old 65 m.p.h. limit in district court instead of county court.

After conferring with Simmons, Meyer said the attorney "has assured me that the next case will be filed directly in district court."

That way, Meyer noted, the question of the constitutionality of the 55 m.p.h. speed limit could possibly be settled by the Nebraska Supreme Court.

Speeders Let Off

The minor imbroglio was touched off recently when Banner County Associate Judge Robert Downer dismissed speeding charges against motorists, according to Simmons, ticketed for going over 55 m.p.h. but less than 65 m.p.h.

Downer, who is not a lawyer, reportedly found the law unconstitutional because it states the governor shall have the power to raise the speed limit once it is determined the fuel situation has improved sufficiently. Downer ruled that provision is invalid because it delegates legislative authority namely, setting speed limits, to the governor thus violates safeguards for separation of powers.

He also found it was vague, whereas criminal statutes are supposed to be precise and specific.

All of this would not have created such a stir among top state officials if the issue could have been ultimately resolved by the State Supreme Court.

Provision Lacking

However, Meyer said, there is no provision for the state to appeal criminal cases from county court.

There is, he noted, a special court procedure for the state to get a Supreme Court ruling on cases from district courts involving errors.

With the assurance from Simmons that the next case will be filed in district court, the constitutional question could be settled.

Simmons, who some observers say suggested to Downer that the 55 m.p.h. speed limit might be unconstitutional, could not be reached for comment on the agreement with Meyer.

When asked why Simmons agreed to file the next case in district court, Meyer said, "That's a question you'll have to ask him." Meyer had indicated earlier that he was working to resolve the unique situation in Banner County.

"If the district court hands down an adverse ruling," Meyer said, "this way it can be settled by the Supreme Court."

"If it's a bad law, then we should all know."

Highway Commissioner, Rancher Thane Davis Dies

Hyannis (AP) —

Thane Davis, Hyannis rancher and a member of the Nebraska Highway Commission since 1958, died in a Denver hospital Sunday.

Davis, 59, had been hospitalized since he was injured in a traffic accident on Highway 61 north of Hyannis April 20.

Relatives said fractures Davis suffered in the accident had healed and death was a result of complications.

Davis, chairman of the commission in 1971, was serving a term on the commission expiring in 1977.

Davis, a native Nebraskan, was a 1939 graduate of the University of Nebraska and was active in Democratic Party activities.

Survivors include his widow,

Jean; a son Albert, a college student in Denver; another son by a previous marriage, Stephen of Pomona, Calif., and two grandchildren.

Railroad Reopened Near North Platte

North Platte (UPI)—The eastbound line of the Union Pacific Railroad five miles east of here was reopened to traffic early Sunday afternoon.

Fourteen cars of a UP freight train were derailed Saturday, blocking both east and west-bound tracks. The westbound line was cleared about an hour after the accident.

Authorities said Sunday their investigation revealed that a broken wheel was the cause of the accident. There were no injuries.

Most of the derailed cars contained lettuce and barley.

A UP spokesman said two of the cars were so badly damaged they will be scrapped. The other 12 cars were to be re-railed Monday.

2 Grand Island Workers Killed

St. Paul (AP) — Two Grand Island men were electrocuted Saturday in a mishap at the Clayton Jares farm south of St. Paul.

Sheriff Ron Bryer said the victims were Wallace Nunnenkamp, 33, and Bob Christensen, 21.

The sheriff said the two men apparently were replacing a motor on a well when a steel boom on their truck came in contact with a high voltage line.

Schmidt Wins Narrow Victory

©The New York Times

Bonn — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's Social Democrats and their partners in the governing coalition, the Free Democrats, won a narrow victory in hotly contested state legislative elections in Lower Saxony Sunday, according to incomplete results.

Politicians and political observers had agreed during the long campaign that a victory for the coalition would show that Schmidt's takeover from Willy Brandt last month had halted the trend of last winter, in which the Social Democrats were losing votes in local elections in Hamburg and elsewhere.

For the last month Schmidt, Brandt and leading politicians of the opposition Christian Democrats had stumped the big state of Lower Saxony from Wolfburg, on the East German border, to Emden on the North Sea, near the Netherlands. It would have been taken as a severe blow to Schmidt's government in Bonn if the Christian Democrats had unsated the Social Democrats in Lower Saxony.

The Christian Democrats gained and the Social Democrats lost Sunday but Brandt told a television interviewer that he interpreted the results in Lower Saxony as a "turning point" for his party.

Proposed planks for the Federal Party dealt with equal rights for women, emphasis on rehabilitation in prison reform, restricting beef imports, stricter drug laws, change in the welfare system and improving law enforcement in smaller towns.

One Federal proposal called for the limitation of campaign funds, in order to "give people with smaller funds an equal chance." Another, dealing with the energy crisis, said farmers should have preferential access to gasoline because "farming is a basic industry to Nebraska."

Proposals supporting the use of thermonuclear energy for domestic issues and increased allocation of funds for solar energy research rounded out the Federal resolutions.

The National party planks included support of farm price aid, penal reform, existing speed limits and a stricter enforcement of pollution laws. The expansion of high school girls' sports programs and having a practical application of government in schools also were suggested.

Platform committees for both parties will present the proposals to their members for approval Monday.

In Federal elections, Mary Mahula of North Platte was selected party chairman. Other officers are Debby Giles of Omaha, vice chairman; Jeanne Allison of Plainview, secretary, and Shelly Menolascino of Omaha, treasurer.

Deborah Marion of Omaha was elected chairman of the National Party. Shelly Ball of Bertrand was named vice chairman, while Rhonda Hawthorne of Palmer and Mary Elworth of Plattsmouth were elected secretary and treasurer.

In a joint session with Cornhusker Boys State, Girls State delegates were to hear an address by Gov. J. J. Exon Sunday night.

Nixon Anticipates 'Difficult' Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon said Sunday he is embarking on his "long, difficult and very important journey" to the Middle East with the goal of helping build an era of peace in the troubled region.

The President, who leaves Monday morning on the first leg of his 15,000-mile trip, also told a luncheon of cheering, chanting supporters that he intends to serve his full term and leave office in January, 1977, "with our heads held high."

Hitting again on a theme he is sounding repeatedly in his efforts to blunt impeachment, Nixon said "a strong American president is essential if we are to have peace in the world."

"With your support I shall do nothing that will weaken this office," the President added. He then paused as the 1,400 guests struck up a chant of "God bless Nixon!"

Nixon traced his foreign policy breakthroughs with China and the Soviet Union, saying much has been accomplished but "there remains much to be done."

He said he was going to the Middle East on what he described as "a difficult trip from the standpoint of diplomacy" in an attempt to build "on the progress which has been made... by Secretary (Henry A.) Kissinger."

"All problems that exist in that area will not be solved" by his journey, Nixon said, adding that he intends to stress that the U.S. goal is not one of domination "but one of assurance for every nation in the area... of the right to independence, the right, to security, the right to seek their own way, to achieve their own goals."

His objective, Nixon said at another point, is to convince all nations of the world to join in "the works of peace rather than the works of war."

Prior to Nixon's speech, Syrian President Assad again forecast a resumption of diplomatic relations with the United States. "This is what is required in the interest of both countries," Assad said in an interview on ABC's Issues and Answers.

Nixon's appearance Sunday was before the National Citizens' Committee for Fairness to the Presidency, a group whose purpose, according to one spokesman, is "to serve notice on the radical-liberal media and legislators that their vendette against the President will not go unchallenged."

Syria is one of five Middle East nations Nixon will visit. The others are Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Israel and Jordan.

First, however, Nixon will fly to the Austrian Alps where he will rest for two nights in Salzburg to adjust to the time change.

He has scheduled talks Tuesday morning with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, who made a fact-finding mission to the Middle East in March and returned last week from an official visit to Moscow.

Nixon's official party is headed by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who paved the way for the President's trip by negotiating Arab-Israeli troop disengagement agreements. Other members include Nixon's top two White House aides, Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Ronald L. Ziegler, as well as Mrs. Nixon.

Aides were arranging a red-carpet sendoff for the President and his party when it leaves the White House lawn early Monday for Andrews Air Force Base and the 8½-hour flight to Austria.

The President told the luncheon of supporters that he expects "a long trip, a difficult trip from the physical standpoint." But he added that "when we sometimes may feel tired... we will never be discouraged. We will always be heartened by the memory of this luncheon."

"You come from the heart of America and you have touched our hearts," he said.

Portugal Mending Break

Lisbon — Mending a break that occurred more than 50 years ago, Portugal and the Soviet Union have established diplomatic relations. Portugal's new democratic regime, which has indicated friendliness toward Communist countries, agreed to exchange diplomatic missions with the Soviets at an ambassadorial level.

Italy Seeks Loan

Rome — Despite a slip in her international credit rating over a two-year period of heavy borrowing, Italy is seeking a big loan from the United States or West Germany, or both — probably of more than $1 billion — to bail herself out of her grave financial crisis, informed sources here said. The more than 2,600 tons of gold in the vaults of the Bank of Italy are believed in Rome to qualify as collateral.

Fruitful Trip Expected

Washington — President Nixon's departure Monday for a nine-day trip to the Middle East will mark the first time an American President has toured the Arab countries and Israel while in office. The Arab countries reportedly look upon his trip with expectation. American officials believe that Nixon will further accelerate improved Arab-American relations, and that he will give a new pledge of continued American support for Israel when he meets the leaders of the new Israeli government.

Earl, Countess Freed

Dublin — Lady Donoughmore said she and her husband, the Earl of Donoughmore, who was bloodstained and scarred, were "very thrilled" to have been freed after four days of captivity by their kidnappers whom they believe were members of the Provisional Irish Republican Army. The earl and the countess were abducted from their home near Clonmel, Ireland, and set free in Dublin's Phoenix Park.

Administration Interfered

Washington — A report by the staff of the Senate Watergate Committee charges that the Nixon administration and the President's re-election campaign officials attempted, and sometimes succeeded in, efforts to interfere with the lawful functioning of the government for the purpose of rewarding the President's political supporters and punishing his enemies. "A concerted and concealed" report by White House officials in 1972, the report said, to divert resources of the executive branch, may have amounted to a criminal "conspiracy to defraud the United States."

Attica Trials Start

New York — Nearly three years after the bloody Attica prison riots that left 43 dead, legal entanglements still snarl the indictments of 61 persons charged with crimes stemming from the revolt. One trial is slated to start Monday, but is not likely to get anywhere.

Nixon Trip Dangerous — Jackson

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said Sunday that President Nixon's Middle East trip is "fraught with danger" and, at best, "will be more cosmetic and ceremonial than it will be substance."

"It doesn't make much sense," said Jackson. "Dr. (Henry A.) Kissinger spent a little over a month in that area. He's just back. And now he's going back again with the President."

Nixon leaves early Monday. Although Jackson would not elaborate much, he said one "danger" of the trip was that the Golan Heights disengagement agreement negotiated by Kissinger "can come unstuck."

"What if the war should erupt in Syria again?" asked Jackson. "That's a definite possibility. And the Soviets are there en masse... with 2,000 soldiers and civilians. I don't think that's the kind of climate for the President to be moving into."

Jackson's comments came on the CBS "Face the Nation" program.

In Damascus, Syrian President Hafez Assad said on ABC's "Issues and Answers" program that his nation "is seriously endeavoring to have good and normal relations with the United States."

Jackson said also that "It's poor judgment on the part of the President to be out of the country while the House Judiciary Committee moves into a serious phase of the charges against him."

"He's going to be besieged overseas by the Free World press: our allies are going to wonder what's going on."

Palestinians Hope To Form State

By The Associated Press
Israel accused Syria on Sunday of "brutal torture" of prisoners of war; Palestinian leaders called for an independent Palestinian state on occupied Arab lands, and Syria said it is "seriously endeavoring" to promote friendship with Washington.

The Palestinian leaders, at a National Council meeting in Cairo, reportedly agreed on forming the independent state out of "every inch of liberated land" that Israel gives up.

But they did not say how they hoped to regain the land or whether their plans involved Palestinian participation in Arab-Israeli peace talks at Geneva.

A final decision on Geneva attendance was left up to the Executive Council of the Palestinian Liberation Organization headed by guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat. Arafat was re-elected president and chairman of the Liberation Organization.

A member of the group that claimed responsibility for the guerrilla raid on the Israeli settlement of Qiryat Shmonah last April was also elected to the council.

Prisoners repatriated under the disengagement agreement worked out through mediation by Henry A. Kissinger have been trading charges of brutality by their captors.

Israeli Information Minister Aharon Yariv continued the exchange on Sunday, charging Syria with "inhuman treatment." Yariv gave no details of the alleged torture, but a senior military command officer said it involved regular beatings, electric shocks and poor medical treatment. Both governments have denied the brutality charges.

A senior Israeli officer said Sunday all Israeli captives were tortured daily while in captivity in Syria.

The officer told newsmen at a briefing, "Syrian treatment of Israeli prisoners was far from humane." He added that one Israeli said he had been injected with a drug that made him black out.

Syrian President Hafez Assad said in an interview broadcast Sunday that his country "is seriously endeavoring to have good and normal relations with the United States."

Assad, speaking on ABC-TV's Issues and Answers, said things are returning to "normal between the United States and Damascus."

He said that in the past "it was clear that the United States was biased toward Israel."

He noted that America's vital interests in the Arab world "can grow and prosper in the atmosphere of good relations with the Arab people, while they would be fatally weakened in the atmosphere of hostility caused by the biased policy toward aggressive Israel."

Ah Begorra! Stout Drought Painful For Irish 'Pint Men'

DUBLIN (AP) — The Guinness brewery is on strike for the first time in its 215-year history, and an Irish bartender says, "The situation is nothing short of desperate."

It's the same story from Limerick to Londonderry, and the blight may spread to Liverpool, Glasgow, Boston and New York.

The cause of the drought — not a drop has been brewed since May 27 — is the first official strike in the history of the sprawling red brick brewery, which the 18th century patriot-politician Henry Grattan called "the actual nurse of the people."

Patrick Mulligan, reporting from his bar in Wexford, said he's been dry of draft stout for a week and he couldn't even offer draft beers from other breweries because Guinness' distributes the gas which forces the brew out of the keg and through the pumps.

"It is just like the song we were singing a few years back and laughing about: The Pub With No Beer," Mulligan said.

The issues are complicated, partly because the 3,500 work force at the brewery is divided among more than 20 unions.

Unrest had been evident for some months. Unskilled men in the Workers Union of Ireland won a pay rise. Then 1,500 skilled men in 19 unions threatened to strike unless their margins over the unskilled were restored. They won their point, but the Workers' Union pulled out its members demanding a return to the previous scales.

Talks broke down Friday and no one gives much hope for success in the next round due to start Monday.

All this is painful to Guinness, which has been peaceful since Arthur Guinness came here in 1759 to establish his brewery at St. James's Gate on the south bank of the Liffey River.

It is painful too for the "pint men," the citizens who sit or used to sit, in quiet contemplation of the black creamy stout which accounts for 60 per cent of all beer consumed in Ireland.

A regular pint man will work through eight to 12 pints a day.

In Dublin, the drought is more marked in the suburbs than the city center. "But for the strike we would never survive the strike," said the head man at the Oval Bar off O'Connell Street.

He meant that a month-long bus strike has so cut downtown business that stout supplies are holding out, though he's down to four days' supply. Stocks of bottled stout are less critical. Most Irish bars keep at least a month's supply of the bottled brew in stock to let it settle.

In Limerick, Ireland's third largest city, only 10 of 200 bars had draft stout at the weekend and the Limerick Leader reported a change in the social pattern — husbands staying at home.

A light piece in the paper told of a wife introducing a former pint man to the joys of domesticity: "These are our three youngest children, and that square thing in the corner is a television set," she said.

Ralph Nader Favors Compulsory Voting Law

San Francisco (UPI)—Consumer advocate Ralph Nader would like to see the vote made mandatory.

In a panel at a conference on urban environment Saturday, Nader noted that only 49% of the voters turned out last Tuesday for the key California primary.

He said a compulsory voting law would eliminate the time and energy spent in registering voters; prevent politicians from pandering to certain blocks of voters; and prevent government "obstructions" to voting, especially for poor people.

Nader stressed that under his plan, citizens would have the right to "vote to abstain" from any candidate, and also could write in candidates.

Panelist Davis O. Rankin noted that he had been assaulted by the courts and police. "Doesn't the daily problem of survival have to be solved first?" He asked Nader.

But Nader responded, "You have got to tell people who are being victimized that nothing will save them unless they participate in the solutions, such as voting."

French Cabinet Official Is Dismissed In Dispute

Paris (AP) — President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing dismissed Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber from the French cabinet on Sunday in a dispute over French nuclear tests in the Pacific.

Servan-Schreiber, who was the administrative reforms minister, has long been an outspoken critic of France's nuclear test program. He publicly protested the tests again earlier Sunday.

Giscard d'Estaing announced Saturday that France would end its above-ground nuclear tests following a series planned for this summer. The future tests will be conducted underground, he said.

Servan-Schreiber, a leading magazine publisher and politician, heads the left-of-center Radical party. The party supports the president in the National Assembly.

Premier Jacques Chirac met with the president Sunday evening. He and Giscard d'Estaing have been in office for only two weeks. The premier said after the meeting that Servan-Schreiber had been fired for making statements "contradicting the fundamental principle of ministerial solidarity."

Servan-Schreiber, a thorn in the side of the Gaullist regime for the past 16 years, went to the Pacific testing site last summer to protest the atmospheric tests.

His agreement to join Chirac's cabinet after the election of Giscard d'Estaing last month appeared to indicate he would moderate his opposition to the tests.

But the government promise to hold future tests underground apparently did not mollify the minister.

"Bombs are going to explode again the skies of the South Pacific. It is a thing I opposed with all my strength last year and I still disapprove of it this year with the same conviction," Servan-Schreiber told a news conference on Sunday.

He said the decision to make tests in later series underground "preserves our future but cannot entirely redress the damage caused to our country."

Servan-Schreiber also claimed the military had forced its views on Chirac's two-week-old administration.

India's Nuclear Arms Are Worry To Bhutto

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto of Pakistan said Sunday that the nuclear weapons now possessed by India might be used by a future Indian government for other than peaceful purposes.

"It is a question not only of intentions but of capabilities," he said. "Assurances could at any time be ignored in subsequent years because governments change as do national attitudes."

Bhutto's remarks were in a letter responding to one sent him by Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. Mrs. Gandhi said India's first nuclear test May 18 was only for peaceful purposes.

"Pakistan has reasons for special anxiety because of confrontation and unresolved disputes which have bedeviled relations between India and Pakistan," Bhutto said. "The fact cannot be dismissed that dismemberment of Pakistan was brought about as a result of armed intervention by India in December 1971.

"The nuclear explosion is an event which cannot be viewed in isolation from its surrounding circumstances. Your rapidly developing program for acquiring medium range missiles and, with external assistance, placing a satellite in orbit, thus obtaining a delivery system for nuclear weapons, and your projected building of a nuclear navy are most pertinent in this context.

In New Delhi, the Indian minister of state for foreign affairs, Surendra Pal Singh, said he was told during a tour of Latin America and a visit to London that many countries remain unconvinced by India's pledge to use its nuclear capability for peaceful purposes.

He said British officials told him India should reiterate its intention not to opt for nuclear weapons.

Colson Says He Told Nixon About Cover-Up In Early 1973

NEW YORK (AP) — Former White House aide Charles Colson has told Watergate investigators that he told President Nixon about the Watergate cover-up a full two months before Nixon says he heard about it, Time magazine reported Sunday.

The magazine says that Colson, who pleaded guilty last week to obstruction of justice in connection with the burglary of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office, has told investigators that he discussed the cover-up with Nixon in January and February of 1973.

Nixon says he learned of efforts to cover up the burglary from former White House counsel John W. Dean on March 21, 1973.

Time says that in January Colson "told the President: 'something is going on here—that is very wrong. There's got to be an investigation.' Colson quotes Nixon as replying: 'What do you think we ought to do?' Colson's answer: 'I'll see what I can find out.'"

The magazine says that in February, Colson learned of former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell's alleged approval of payments to the original Watergate defendants.

"Colson promptly warned the President that these payoffs were taking place," Time says. "Nixon's alleged reply: 'What do you mean?' Mitchell says he is innocent."

Colson, the account says, then told his story to Dean, H.R. Haldeman, then White House chief of staff, and former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman. All of them, Time says, were unconcerned.

Time also reported that Colson told investigators that he discussed clemency for convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt after Hunt's wife was killed in a plane crash in Chicago in December 1972. Time said it could not be learned if Nixon approved the clemency.

In an unrelated development, Time said the House Judiciary Committee, which is considering Nixon's impeachment, "should meet a target date of July 15 for taking its vote. It said Rep. Peter W. Rodino, the committee's chairman, has told House Speaker Carl Albert he can meet that deadline.

Raped Coeds Strangle Rapist

NEW SMYRNA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Two coeds raped by a man who picked them up hitchhiking strangled him with his bandana after he stabbed one girl with an icepick, police said Sunday.

A spokesman for the Volusia County sheriff's department identified the dead man as Lee Arthur Godwin, 26, an ex-convict who lived near Vero Beach, Fla.

Under Florida law, the names of rape victims are not released. They were identified only as 20-year-old students from Indiana University at Bloomington, Ind.

Police said the backpacking coeds had visited friends in South Florida and were hitchhiking to Atlanta on Interstate 95 Friday when Godwin picked them up near Melbourne, about 75 miles south of this Florida Atlantic coast resort city.

Godwin turned off the highway and told the women he wanted to pick some marijuana he was growing in the woods, police said.

The women accompanied him into the woods, where he pulled the icepick and raped them both, police said.

Officers said he then told the coeds he was going to kill them and inflicted a minor stab wound on one woman's neck when he lunged at her with the icepick. The other woman grabbed his arm and her wounded friend managed to get hold of the red bandana on Godwin's neck and tighten it. When he lay still, the girls thought he was only unconscious and fled to a nearby farmhouse where they called police.

Officers who answered the call found Godwin dead in the woods.

The sheriff's spokesman said the girls were treated at a local hospital Saturday and were released. No charges were filed and an inquest will be held later this week.

'Doomsayers' Are Threat To U.S., Says Ford

CLEVELAND, OHIO (AP) — Vice President Gerald R. Ford said Sunday that efforts to portray slain Symphonies Liberation Army member "outlaws" as innocent victims are part of a negativism that is the greatest threat to the United States.

"I will not permit the doomsayers to construct a self-fulfilling prophesy of defeat and despair," Ford said. "Our greatest threat," he said, "comes from no foreign foe but from those at home who seek to impose the power of negative thinking."

Earlier, he attended a special concert for him by the Mormon Tabernacle Choir on Temple Square in Salt Lake City.

He said the "prophets of doom and gloom" predict the country will be destroyed by inflation, food shortages, the energy crisis and government institutions that are "beyond hope."

"I reject that scenario," he said. "The vice president did not name the 'prophets of negativity' but implied they include part of the news media."

"We cannot write off every newspaper and every television network with wild generalizations about media conspiracies," he said. "But we can choose which newspaper we read and which network we prefer."

An example of the negativism, he said, was what he called "an outcry against the police in Los Angeles because police dared to shoot back at a murderous group of self-proclaimed revolutionaries."

Obviously referring to the shootout and fire in which six SLA members were killed, Ford said there were charges of police brutality and "an effort to portray the outlaws as persons of high moral standing."

Obviously referring to Watergate, he said, "I submit that it is immoral to condemn by individual sin the government but to condone crime by revolutionaries in California."

He also said the entire Nixon administration and Republican party should not be written off "with a sweeping generalization about individual wrongdoing."

Ford told the Conference of Christians and Jews that it "did not surrender to hopelessness and gloom and doom" but rather has forged a policy to achieve brotherhood between the various races and religions in America.

Ford made his remarks in a speech at the annual banquet of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

When Ford arrived at the hotel for his speech, he walked past 50 pickets who said they represented the radical group Youth against War and Fascism. They chanted, "Tricky Dick, we're here to you Gerald Ford is a puppet too."

Ford also said that "the pessimists" said that (Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger) could never bring about a disengagement of Syrian and Israeli forces" but that Kissinger committed himself to the goal and achieved it.

He discounted what he said are claims by some that the President is making the trip for public relations purposes and that nothing will be achieved.

French Cabinet Official Is Dismissed In Dispute

Paris (AP) — President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing dismissed Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber from the French cabinet on Sunday in a dispute over French nuclear tests in the Pacific.

Servan-Schreiber, who was the administrative reforms minister, has long been an outspoken critic of France's nuclear test program. He publicly protested the tests again earlier Sunday.

Giscard d'Estaing announced Saturday that France would end its above-ground nuclear tests following a series planned for this summer. The future tests will be conducted underground, he said.

Servan-Schreiber, a leading magazine publisher and politician, heads the left-of-center Radical party. The party supports the president in the National Assembly.

Premier Jacques Chirac met with the president Sunday evening. He and Giscard d'Estaing have been in office for only two weeks. The premier said after the meeting that Servan-Schreiber had been fired for making statements "contradicting the fundamental principle of ministerial solidarity."

"The government was not consulted and the military authorities indeed have placed before the cabinet an accomplished fact," Servan-Schreiber said at a news conference at his home in Nancy.

A Defense Ministry announcement Saturday indicated that a new series of atmospheric tests would soon be held over Mururoa atoll in the South Pacific.

Colson Gets Religion

Charles W. Colson apparently got religion, with an assist from Iowa's Sen. Harold Hughes, and pleaded guilty to a felony charge of obstructing justice in the alleged White House Watergate coverup. His real purpose, it is reported, is to free himself from jurisdiction of the courts so that he may cleanse his soul with a full disclosure of what he knows about Watergate.

Colson is reported to have been a member of a small prayer group that included the evangelistic Hughes. And that group is reported to be a part of a wide movement in this country among members of many religions to the fervor of evangelism.

In some faiths, the movement centers around ultimate baptism of the spirit, a kind of dedication to and faith in the third person of the trinity, the Holy Spirit. Throughout the movement, there is heavy emphasis upon the Bible, especially the new testament writings.

The movement fits with other reports that there is a growing hunger for religion and new morality among citizens of our land. What one wonders is where it will all end, whether it will be only a brief flash of spontaneity and whether it will include or exclude existing formal churches.

The movement seems to cross the lines between protestant and Catholic faiths and to rely heavily upon personal faith as an end to ultimate salvation.

If it does, indeed, represent a search for greater moral values than the past has seen it could hardly be anything but welcome. For Colson, it apparently means a dedication to the truth and that is something with which there can be little argument.

In its communal nature and its lack of formality and rules, the movement is another challenge to established institutions of society. It reminds us once again that our churches, our laws and many of our other structures have not managed to find the answers and the guidance that many people seek.

The movement will be one to watch in the future as a result of its impact upon the decisions men make and the standards by which they live. Colson's getting religion may be significant in Watergate affairs but it could be a sign of something even bigger.

What's The Fuss About?

Foes of Gov. Jim Exon — some within his own party — continue to mutter and sputter over the $67,000 spent on the campaign to renominate Exon and to obtain the lieutenant governor nomination for his preferred running-mate, Jerry Whelan. The team used the campaign treasury to good advantage, with Exon coasting against a little-known opponent and Whelan roaring home far ahead of better-known opposition. That 40,000-vote Whelan margin is probably what makes some folks mad about the $67,000.

At any rate, some of Exon's fellow Democrats have questioned the amount spent by the Exon-Whelan team and Republicans have said that it is sure to be an issue in the gubernatorial general election campaign.

We're not defending or criticizing the amount spent in the primary by the Exon-Whelan team — just wondering what all the fuss is about.

If one wants to go back and look at the Tiemann or Curtis or Hruska war chests, $67,000 looks mighty paltry indeed. But let's not go back. Even in post-Watergate America, that amount is really not very much with which to wage an energetic, effective campaign for high office. Compare it with what is being spent in some congressional campaigns, where there is less area to cover and less voters to convince and one can readily see that $67,000 spent on a statewide race is not particularly extravagant.

It should also be noted that the total amount that Richard Marvel, the GOP gubernatorial nominee and his running mate, Anne Batchelder, spent was almost as much as the Exon-Whelan outlay, although the GOP nominees did not spend as a team.

There is not a significant difference between the two figures and if the GOP team wants to quibble about the difference, their campaign must be bankrupt as far as issues are concerned.

ON TARGET

By DON WALTON

California voters demanded and imposed reforms on the political system last week. Nebraska voters flubbed one opportunity to begin that process last month.

In Nebraska, the proposed constitutional amendment to increase legislative salaries from $400 to $675 a month went down the drain.

That's political reform? You betcha.

Quoting from a May 26 article on lobbying published in the Miami Herald:

"In the old days, when legislators got paid $1,200 a year, buying a guy a meal and a glass of whiskey may have meant something," says Howard Jay Friedman, veteran lobbyist for the Department of Education.

"But today, these guys get $12,000, they're paid $25 per diem, and they can pay their own bills. They don't need the free meal, and they might not even remember it."

The figures are different — and the ball park is considerably different in Florida. But the principle is the same.

When you make the legislators more independent financially, they may be more independent period. Okay?

One of the greatest reforms undertaken in Nebraska's legislative process was instituted by the Legislature itself. At long last, largely at the insistence of Terry Carpenter, it has beefed up the research and fiscal staff and provided senators with individual secretaries and, in some cases, legislative aides.

No longer must a senator use the lobbyist as his basic source of information. The lobbyist is one source of information, and a generally useful one, but there are other, less partial sources of information open to him now.

Freeing public officeholders from too much dependence on the lobbyist is a major plank in the structure of political reform.

John Cavanaugh plans to return to the 1975 Legislature with a plan to require fuller and more detailed reporting of lobbyists' activities. That bill deserves enactment. And, in view of last week's California vote, it may win it.

Lobbying should not be prevented. It serves a useful purpose. But the voters — and the senators themselves — ought to know how much a piece of legislation is worth to a special interest group, and how it went about using its influence to support it.

In Florida, there is a state law requiring public disclosure by elected officials of gifts worth $25 or more.

In California, lobbyists are now prohibited from spending more than $10 per month to influence any state official.

The Cavanaugh proposal does not, as yet, include such restrictions.

California voters also imposed spending limits on candidates, providing challengers with a slight financial advantage over incumbents. The amount that incumbents may spend will be 10% less than challengers may spend.

Whether spending limits are constitutional (they could be an invasion of freedom of speech in a political campaign) remains to be seen.

Governor Exon has presented the Legislature with proposals for spending lids in the past. And, one way or another, they are likely to be a subject for consideration by the next session.

Jerry Warner has led the way thus far in reforming the campaign contribution system. And one might guess that he'll be back next year with some fresh ideas.

Also ripe for a closer look is Nebraska's rather weak conflict of interest laws, which are overseen by an essentially non-functioning Conflicts of Interest Committee and Code of Ethics Board.

A corollary to stricter prohibition of conflicts of interest is a legislative salary increase. And another pay boost proposal ought to be affixed to the 1976 ballot as part and parcel of political reform in Nebraska.

It's the second week of June. That means it won't be long now, will it?

Seems to me there is usually some sort of all-star game down south in June before the biggie in Chicago featuring the Miami-Toronto Dolphins and Turncoats.

The WFL opens this summer, doesn't it? And NFL exhibitions will be underway in August — if everyone isn't out on strike.

Those summer preview magazines should be filling the newsstands in a matter of weeks.

And the countdown in Lincoln has moved below 100. Just 96 days from today, the Ducks come waddling into Devaney Bowl.

Rating The Newscasters

By Kevin P. Phillips and
Albert E. Shalinger

The Watergate disclosures of the last year have restored Walter Cronkite to the position of most trusted and most objective television newscaster in the eyes of the American public. And even the President's open antagonist, Dan Rather of CBS, has profited from a sharp rise in public trust.

These and other attitudes emerged in the Second Annual Phillips-Shalinger Survey of public opinion toward key television newscasters. The poll of 1,679 nationwide telephone interviews was conducted between May 23-26.

Here are the key findings:

— After a 1973 dip, Walter Cronkite has regained — by a wide margin — his position as America's most trusted and most objective TV newscaster.

— With President Nixon's own credibility eroding, the newscaster scoring the greatest 1973-74 advance in trust by the public was CBS' Dan Rather — commonly cast in the role of the President's archfoe.

— Eric Sevareid is regarded as the most liberal newscaster, while John Chancellor is the man most widely characterized as a moderate.

The heavy news emphasis of the last year has made the American people far more conscious of television newscasters, and when we asked them various questions, there were fewer "don't knows" than in 1973. This proved especially true of the public's willingness to characterize different newsmen as liberals, moderates or conservatives. And as a result of this increased perception, several newsmen showed significant changes in their ideological profiles: Eric Sevareid, Dan Rather and Barbara Walters all registered gains of at least 10 per cent in the number of people characterizing them as "liberals."

NBC's John Chancellor's surge came in the "moderate" category. Meanwhile, a substantially larger number of respondents described Walter Cronkite and Roger Mudd as "Conservatives."

At first, there may appear to be a paradox here. Along with Eric Sevareid, Walter Cronkite and Roger Mudd are the newscasters seen as most liberal by the American people in mid-1974. The interesting thing, though, is that a growing minority now see Walter Cronkite and Roger Mudd as conservatives.

Repeating last year's question we also asked respondents, "How do you rate these TV personalities on trust or on accuracy in presenting the news — would you rate them as very high, very low, or what do you think?" In this category, Walter Cronkite finished first with 69.8 per cent giving him a "very high" rating, and John Chancellor finished second with 65.4 per cent.

BOB CONSIDINE

It Started With St. Paul

New York — The conversion of St. Paul has come to mind more than once in the ups and downs and pros and cons of Watergate and its related scandals. The most clear-cut parallel was the flash of lightning that caused Charles W. Colson suddenly to switch sides in the biggest domestic controversy of our times.

Paul (nee Saul) was a real pistol, probably a Pharisee, certainly a nationalist. He was completely dedicated to erasing the growth of a rival party, Christianity. One day he set out from Jerusalem, where he had been superbly educated by the great Gamaliel, to carry out the orders of the high priest to sabotage a Christian movement in Damascus. Somewhere along the road, which has been as much in the news lately as it was nearly 2,000 years ago, Saul was transformed into Paul.

The bolt from the blue, the New Testament insists, blinded Saul and he heard Jesus ask, "Why persecutest thou me?" Henceforth, he turned his back on the men of influence who had been his friends and became the chief herald for the other side.

Colson was the hardest nose in the camp of Richard Nixon. He was closer to the seat of power than, say John Dean 3d. He had as much access to the Oval Office as Bob Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

"I would walk over my grandmother if necessary" to reelect Richard Nixon, ex-Marine officer Colson once wrote. His father said proudly of Colson that he was "viciously loyal" to the President. Mild-mannered Herb Klein, who served Nixon unswervingly as a public relations man for years, before being eased out by the President's inner-inner circle, called Colson a cobra.

Sen Lowell P. Weicker, the Connecticut Republican who was asking too many Democrat-like questions of White House witnesses facing the Watergate committee, found himself being rapped mysteriously and his previous public service darkly questioned. He suspected Colson as the source of the leaks, and said as much. Colson paid a visit to

The changes taking place since last year are even more significant. In June, 1973, Chancellor and Cronkite were neck and neck with Howard K. Smith and Harry Reasoner of ABC, and their "very high trust" ratings were between 50 per cent and 56 per cent. Each of the four men went up in the last 12 months, but Cronkite scored the biggest gain, and now leads the pack.

Other CBS newscasters besides Cronkite also scored major gains in public trust. The number of people rating Eric Sevareid "very high" in trustability went up 17 per cent (to 43 per cent), Roger Mudd's figure went up 15 per cent (to 50 per cent), and the biggest "trust" gain of all was scored by President Nixon's top electronic nemesis, Dan Rather. Last year, only 24 per cent of those polled rated him very trustable and accurate. Now 47 per cent describe him this way — a whopping 23 per cent increase. Meanwhile, the percentage of respondents giving Rather a "very low" rating decreased marginally.

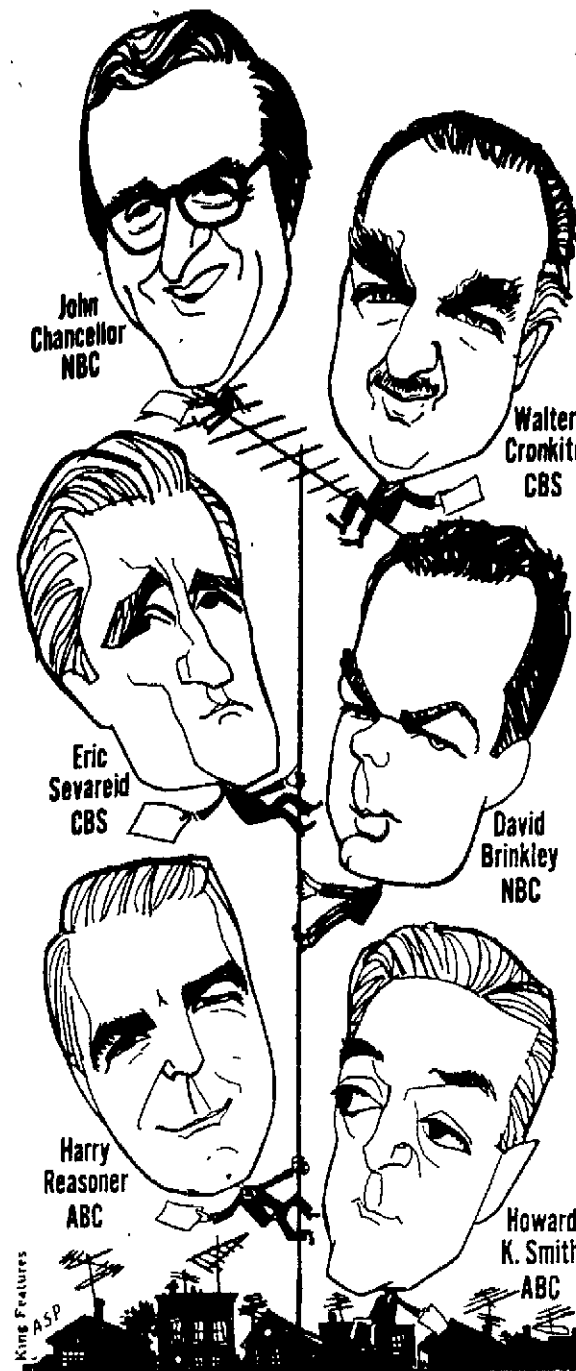

Next respondents were asked: "Of the group of TV news personalities we have been talking about, which would you say is the most objective and least biased in presenting the news?" Here people who had expressed faith and trust in a number of newscasters were obliged to single out just one — and the top choice was Walter Cronkite, named by 26.8 per cent. John Chancellor came next with mentions by 19.4 per cent, Howard K. Smith of ABC was third with 11.5 per cent.

This represents a major shift from the 1973 rankings, when Smith placed first with 15.1 per cent, Chancellor second with 14.2 per cent, Harry Reasoner third with 11.8 per cent and Cronkite fourth with just 10.4 per cent. Largely as a result of the Watergate scandals, Cronkite has vaulted into first place; Chancellor has also gained, but not as much. Both ABC newscasters, Reasoner and Smith, boosted last year by their more pro-Nixon approach, have dropped back. As of May, 1974, only 11.5 per cent of those questioned picked Smith and only 9.7 per cent picked Reasoner.

When the persons interviewed are divided by ideology, an interesting pattern emerges. Predictably, Walter Cronkite is by far and away the liberal favorite — 53.5 per cent of the liberals questioned cited him as the most objective and least biased. Nobody else came close. John Chancellor won among moderates — 34.6 per cent cited him as most objective and least biased. But the real surprise came among conservatives: Walter Cronkite was mentioned as most objective and least biased by 20.6 per cent, John Chancellor came in second with 17.0 per cent, Howard K. Smith third with 15.8 per cent and Harry Reasoner fourth with 12.2 per cent. The most important thrust of our survey results is obvious: The tremendous impact of the Watergate scandals is boosting public faith CBS' liberal newscasters and eroding the credibility of ABC's more-friendly-to-the-Administration team.

Nixon 'Blackmailed'

Lincoln, Neb. In the matter of tapes, the President is being cleverly "blackmailed" by some senators, representatives and reporters, who are lawyers and should know better and if honest would turn themselves into their local bar committees for disciplinary action.

Due to the impermanency of the tape material plus the ease with which tapes can be doctored or erased they are as evidence in a courtroom about equal to a pound of butter melting on a hot day.

These people after the President know that so they try their case against him in the newspapers, hoping to sand bag him with public opinion. It won't work.

Naturally if he refuses to hand over the tapes, knowing, as a lawyer, they are the poorest of evidence, he knows he will be accused of hiding something. So he does the next best thing and hands over part of the tapes. If Congress can subpoena every bit of conversation of a president then there is no need for the office.

The minority party, disgruntled, could put any president away. Even the prosecutor's attempt to hurry the trial by an unprecedented request for haste directed at the Supreme Court is a shoddy attempt at grandstanding.

Courts of necessity in the appeals system work slowly and an attempt to move everything before the November elections will result in ill-considered opinions. There is a limit to how much you can hound someone and these conspirators against Nixon have gone beyond that limit!

Questions Need For City Growth

Roca, Neb. Regarding the current shopping center controversy, it seems to me the time has come for city government to consider the wishes of the people affected rather than the pressures of the developers! Having spent 16 of the 26 years I have lived in Lincoln or environs failing to convince City Hall that I have the right to choose inconvenience, I appeal to those of you with similar convictions to join me in protest.

We who choose to live away from congested neighborhoods do so knowing that it will take more time, more gasoline, more planning our trips, and we do it willingly. We also accept the expense of installing our own septic systems and wells and of maintaining them. We do not move out to escape city taxes, as some have charged, as our extra expenses add up to far more than the taxes; we move out because we like to be away from noise and lights and traffic. At the same time, we appreciate the fine schools, beautiful stores and cultural advantages Lincoln has to offer, and support them with our money as well as our service to the community.

In my opinion growth is not synonymous with progress. Cancer is certainly growth, but who needs it? If we are to preserve the special quality which Lincoln has we must think now about the direction we are taking.

We can follow Denver and other once-lovely cities down the path to over-development or we can, like Oregon, discourage growth for growth's sake, and work to preserve those qualities which make Lincoln unique and wholesome. It seems to me there is ample opportunity for imaginative developers all over town.

The downtown mall would be a more proper focus for the city to promote, I think, than shopping centers which we neither need nor have asked for. Rundown neighborhoods, needed low-income housing and recycling vacant buildings should more than challenge developers. A proposed Children's Center and Museum like the one in Boston could be a goldmine for a civic-minded developer with something more than just lining his pockets as a goal — to mention but a few alternatives to paving over the countryside.

So think, all who care about the future of Lincoln, and do something, while there is still time.

Safety Official Responds

Lincoln, Neb. Your editorial, "Two Views of Failure", (June 7) requires a response.

Not one, so far as I know, disagrees with your criticism of the Federal government "for threatening to destroy a state's entire highway safety program because it is not in 100% compliance with Federal standards." But when you assert that the merits of the proposed legislation which the Legislature refused to pass "are not at issue" you seem to me to miss the whole point I was trying to make.

The two pieces of proposed legislation were endorsed by the governor, by his highway safety representative, by the Nebraska Office of Highway Safety and by the Governor's Highway Safety Advisory Committee representing every state agency responsible for highway accident prevention and control in Nebraska.

Having observed the hearings on these bills it was then, and is now, my opinion that the bills were not enacted for what you described in your editorial as "a courageous challenge to Federal authority" and not on the merits of the bills.

I submit that traffic safety is not the arena in which this battle should be fought. The loss, or threatened loss, of highway safety program funds is a field in which the price is paid in human life and suffering. I stand by the proposition that these bills should have been considered on merit and not on political premise.

We should join together in resisting "the arrogance of the Federal government." But not at the expense of a program which is vital to every living Nebraskan and to those yet unborn.

Colson Gets Religion

Charles W. Colson apparently got religion, with an assist from Iowa's Sen. Harold Hughes, and pleaded guilty to a felony charge of obstructing justice in the alleged White House Watergate coverup. His real purpose, it is reported, is to free himself from jurisdiction of the courts so that he may cleanse his soul with a full disclosure of what he knows about Watergate.

Colson is reported to have been a member of a small prayer group that included the evangelistic Hughes. And that group is reported to be a part of a wide movement in this country among members of many religions to the fervor of evangelism.

In some faiths, the movement centers around ultimate baptism of the spirit, a kind of dedication to and faith in the third person of the trinity, the Holy Spirit. Throughout the movement, there is heavy emphasis upon the Bible, especially the new testament writings.

The movement fits with other reports that there is a growing hunger for religion and new morality among citizens of our land. What one wonders is where it will all end, whether it will be only a brief flash of spontaneity and whether it will include or exclude existing formal churches.

The movement seems to cross the lines between protestant and Catholic faiths and to rely heavily upon personal faith as an end to ultimate salvation.

If it does, indeed, represent a search for greater moral values than the past has seen it could hardly be anything but welcome. For Colson, it apparently means a dedication to the truth and that is something with which there can be little argument.

In its communal nature and its lack of formality and rules, the movement is another challenge to established institutions of society. It reminds us once again that our churches, our laws and many of our other structures have not managed to find the answers and the guidance that many people seek.

The movement will be one to watch in the future as a result of its impact upon the decisions men make and the standards by which they live. Colson's getting religion may be significant in Watergate affairs but it could be a sign of something even bigger.

What's The Fuss About?

Foes of Gov. Jim Exon — some within his own party — continue to mutter and sputter over the $67,000 spent on the campaign to renominate Exon and to obtain the lieutenant governor nomination for his preferred running-mate, Jerry Whelan. The team used the campaign treasury to good advantage, with Exon coasting against a little-known opponent and Whelan roaring home far ahead of better-known opposition. That 40,000-vote Whelan margin is probably what makes some folks mad about the $67,000.

At any rate, some of Exon's fellow Democrats have questioned the amount spent by the Exon-Whelan team and Republicans have said that it is sure to be an issue in the gubernatorial general election campaign.

We're not defending or criticizing the amount spent in the primary by the Exon-Whelan team — just wondering what all the fuss is about.

If one wants to go back and look at the Tiemann or Curtis or Hruska war chests, $67,000 looks mighty paltry indeed. But let's not go back. Even in post-Watergate America, that amount is really not very much with which to wage an energetic, effective campaign for high office. Compare it with what is being spent in some congressional campaigns, where there is less area to cover and less voters to convince and one can readily see that $67,000 spent on a statewide race is not particularly extravagant.

It should also be noted that the total amount that Richard Marvel, the GOP gubernatorial nominee and his running mate, Anne Batchelder, spent was almost as much as the Exon-Whelan outlay, although the GOP nominees did not spend as a team.

There is not a significant difference between the two figures and if the GOP team wants to quibble about the difference, their campaign must be bankrupt as far as issues are concerned.

ON TARGET

By DON WALTON

California voters demanded and imposed reforms on the political system last week. Nebraska voters flubbed one opportunity to begin that process last month.

In Nebraska, the proposed constitutional amendment to increase legislative salaries from $400 to $675 a month went down the drain.

That's political reform? You betcha.

Quoting from a May 26 article on lobbying published in the Miami Herald:

"In the old days, when legislators got paid $1,200 a year, buying a guy a meal and a glass of whiskey may have meant something," says Howard Jay Friedman, veteran lobbyist for the Department of Education.

"But today, these guys get $12,000, they're paid $25 per diem, and they can pay their own bills. They don't need the free meal, and they might not even remember it."

The figures are different — and the ball park is considerably different in Florida. But the principle is the same.

When you make the legislators more independent financially, they may be more independent period. Okay?

One of the greatest reforms undertaken in Nebraska's legislative process was instituted by the Legislature itself. At long last, largely at the insistence of Terry Carpenter, it has beefed up the research and fiscal staff and provided senators with individual secretaries and, in some cases, legislative aides.

No longer must a senator use the lobbyist as his basic source of information. The lobbyist is one source of information, and a generally useful one, but there are other, less partial sources of information open to him now.

Freeing public officeholders from too much dependence on the lobbyist is a major plank in the structure of political reform.

John Cavanaugh plans to return to the 1975 Legislature with a plan to require fuller and more detailed reporting of lobbyists' activities. That bill deserves enactment. And, in view of last week's California vote, it may win it.

Lobbying should not be prevented. It serves a useful purpose. But the voters — and the senators themselves — ought to know how much a piece of legislation is worth to a special interest group, and how it went about using its influence to support it.

In Florida, there is a state law requiring public disclosure by elected officials of gifts worth $25 or more.

In California, lobbyists are now prohibited from spending more than $10 per month to influence any state official.

The Cavanaugh proposal does not, as yet, include such restrictions.

California voters also imposed spending limits on candidates, providing challengers with a slight financial advantage over incumbents. The amount that incumbents may spend will be 10% less than challengers may spend.

Whether spending limits are constitutional (they could be an invasion of freedom of speech in a political campaign) remains to be seen.

Governor Exon has presented the Legislature with proposals for spending lids in the past. And, one way or another, they are likely to be a subject for consideration by the next session.

Jerry Warner has led the way thus far in reforming the campaign contribution system. And one might guess that he'll be back next year with some fresh ideas.

Also ripe for a closer look is Nebraska's rather weak conflict of interest laws, which are overseen by an essentially non-functioning Conflicts of Interest Committee and Code of Ethics Board.

A corollary to stricter prohibition of conflicts of interest is a legislative salary increase. And another pay boost proposal ought to be affixed to the 1976 ballot as part and parcel of political reform in Nebraska.

It's the second week of June. That means it won't be long now, will it?

Seems to me there is usually some sort of all-star game down south in June before the biggie in Chicago featuring the Miami-Toronto Dolphins and Turncoats.

The WFL opens this summer, doesn't it? And NFL exhibitions will be underway in August — if everyone isn't out on strike.

Those summer preview magazines should be filling the newstands in a matter of weeks.

And the countdown in Lincoln has moved below 100. Just 96 days from today, the Ducks come waddling into Devaney Bowl.

By Kevin P. Phillips and Albert E. Sindlinger

The Watergate disclosures of the last year have restored Walter Cronkite to the position of most trusted and most objective television newscaster in the eyes of the American public. And even the President's open antagonist, Dan Rather of CBS, has profited from a sharp rise in public trust.

These and other attitudes emerged in the Second Annual Phillips-Sindlinger Survey of public opinion toward key television newscasters. The poll of 1,679 nationwide telephone interviews was conducted between May 23-26.

Here are the key findings:

— After a 1973 dip, Walter Cronkite has regained — by a wide margin — his position as America's most trusted and most objective TV newscaster.

— With President Nixon's own credibility eroding, the newscaster scoring the greatest 1973-74 advance in trust by the public was CBS' Dan Rather — commonly cast in the role of the President's archfoe.

— Eric Sevareid is regarded as the most liberal newscaster, while John Chancellor is the man most widely characterized as a moderate.

The heavy news emphasis of the last year has made the American people far more conscious of television newscasters, and when we asked them various questions, there were fewer "don't knows" than in 1973. This proved especially true of the public's willingness to characterize different newsmen as liberals, moderates or conservatives. And as a result of this increased perception, several newsmen showed significant changes in their ideological profiles: Eric Sevareid, Dan Rather and Barbara Walters all registered gains of at least 10 per cent in the number of people characterizing them as "liberals."

NBC's John Chancellor's surge came in the "moderate" category. Meanwhile, a substantially larger number of respondents described Walter Cronkite and Roger Mudd as "Conservatives."

At first, there may appear to be a paradox here. Along with Eric Sevareid, Walter Cronkite and Roger Mudd are the newscasters seen as most liberal by the American people in mid-1974. The interesting thing, though, is that a growing minority now see Walter Cronkite and Roger Mudd as conservatives.

Repeating last year's question we also asked respondents, "How do you rate these TV personalities on trust or on accuracy in presenting the news — would you rate them as very high, very low, or what do you think?" In this category, Walter Cronkite finished first with 69.8 per cent giving him a "very high" rating, and John Chancellor finished second with 65.4 per cent.

BOB CONSIDINE

It Started With St. Paul

New York — The conversion of St. Paul has come to mind more than once in the ups and downs and pros and cons of Watergate and its related scandals. The most clear-cut parallel was the flash of lightning that caused Charles W. Colson suddenly to switch sides in the biggest domestic controversy of our times.

Paul (nee Saul) was a real pistol, probably a Pharisee, certainly a nationalist. He was completely dedicated to erasing the growth of a rival party, Christianity. One day he set out from Jerusalem, where he had been superbly educated by the great Gamaliel, to carry out the orders of the high priest to sabotage a Christian movement in Damascus. Somewhere along the road, which has been as much in the news lately as it was nearly 2,000 years ago, Saul was transformed into Paul.

The bolt from the blue, the New Testament insists, blinded Saul and he heard Jesus ask, "Why persecutest thou me?" Henceforth, he turned his back on the men of influence who had been his friends and became the chief herald for the other side.

Colson was the hardest nose in the camp of Richard Nixon. He was closer to the seat of power than, say John Dean 3d. He had as much access to the Oval Office as Bob Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

"I would walk over my grandmother if necessary" to reelect Richard Nixon, ex-Marine officer Colson once wrote. His father said proudly of Colson that he was "viciously loyal" to the President. Mild-mannered Herb Klein, who served Nixon unswervingly as a public relations man for years, before being eased out by the President's inner-circle, called Colson a cobra.

Sen Lowell P. The changes taking place since last year are even more significant. In June, 1973, Chancellor and Cronkite were neck and neck with Howard K. Each of the four men went up in the last 12 months, but Cronkite scored the biggest gain, and now leads the pack.

The number of people rating Eric Sevareid "very high" in trustability went up 17 per cent (to 43 per cent), Roger Mudd's figure went up 15 per cent (to 50 per cent), and the biggest "trust" gain of all was scored by President Nixon's top teletronic nemesis, Dan Rather. Last year, only 24 per cent of those polled rated him very trustable and accurate. Now 47 per cent describe him this way — a whopping 23 per cent increase. Meanwhile, the percentage of respondents giving Rather a "very low" rating decreased marginally.

Next respondents were asked: "Of the group of TV news personalities we have been talking about, which would you say is the most objective and least biased in presenting the news?" Survey: Federal Health Insurance Favored

By LOUIS HARRIS

By 54% to 28%, a majority of the American people favors passage of a comprehensive federal health insurance program, which "would combine government, employer, and employee contributions into one federal health insurance system that would cover all medical and health expenses." By the same token, the public rejects, by 51-30%, President Nixon's less extensive alternate health plan.

When asked what they pay now for health care, the average family reported $133 per year. When asked what they would be willing to pay for comprehensive health coverage, the average came to a higher $186.

In mid-April, the Harris Survey asked a cross section of 1,503 adults across the country: "It has been proposed that Congress pass a comprehensive health insurance program which would combine federal government, employer, and employee contributions into one federal health insurance system that would cover all medical and health expenses. Opponents say a health plan. It also would add federal health insurance to existing employer-employee plans, but opponents have said it does not have enough provisions for the poor and the elderly. They have also charged it might open the way for private insurance companies to profit unduly.

To test the Nixon health proposal, respondents were asked:

"President Nixon recently sent a comprehensive health insurance plan to Congress. The program would use existing employer-employee plans but would add federal health insurance to it. Under the plan, the average married wage earner would pay $150 a year and the average employer would pay $270. The major provision of the plan would provide for complete payment for any medical bills totalling over $1,500. Opponents of the President's plan feel it doesn't do enough for the poor and elderly and doesn't do anything to stop health costs from climbing steadily, or keep insurance companies from making bigger profits. Supporters argue that this plan will provide health insurance coverage for the people and will avoid socialized medicine. All in all, do you favor the President's plan or not?"

NIXON HEALTH INSURANCE PLAN

The public is firmly committed to a health care measure, but simply feels that the Nixon proposal does not go far enough. The old scare words of "socialized medicine" appear to be losing their impact in the middle of the 1970's.

However, the public wants to be sure that any comprehensive health insurance program does not upset the traditional right of people to choose their own doctor. And they would also like to guarantee the elderly and the poor proper medical care more cheaply than others would pay.

The American people are not expecting all of their medical problems to be solved by a new comprehensive medical care bill. But nine in every 10 agree with the statement that "prescription drugs are too high priced," and, most hope that such a health plan will help alleviate this cost problem.

On the other hand, by 70-22%, a sizable majority also feels that "there are not enough doctors in the country to serve the needs of everyone." Presumably, the shortage could be even more acute if more people were covered by insurance which entitled them to doctor care.

Survey: Federal Health Insurance Favored

By LOUIS HARRIS

By 54% to 28%, a majority of the American people favors passage of a comprehensive federal health insurance program, which "would combine government, employer, and employee contributions into one federal health insurance system that would cover all medical and health expenses." By the same token, the public rejects, by 51-30%, President Nixon's less extensive alternate health plan.

When asked what they pay now for health care, the average family reported $133 per year. When asked what they would be willing to pay for comprehensive health coverage, the average came to a higher $186.

In mid-April, the Harris Survey asked a cross section of 1,503 adults across the country:

"It has been proposed that Congress pass a comprehensive health insurance program which would combine federal government, employer, and employee contributions into one federal health insurance system that would cover all medical and health expenses. Opponents say that would get the federal government too much into medicine and health care. Supporters say such insurance is necessary for people to obtain proper coverage. Do you favor or oppose such a comprehensive federal health insurance program?"

COMPREHENSIVE FEDERAL HEALTH INSURANCE PLAN

Favor	54 55
Oppose	28 30
Not sure	18 15

Since 1971, public opinion has held remarkably steady in support of such a comprehensive federal health bill.

Recently, Sen. Edward Kennedy and Rep. Wilbur Mills introduced a modified health bill. President Nixon in turn sent to Capitol Hill his own version of a health plan. It also would add federal health insurance to existing employer-employee plans, but opponents have said it does not have enough provisions for the poor and the elderly. They have also charged it might open the way for private insurance companies to profit unduly.

To test the Nixon health proposal, respondents were asked:

"President Nixon recently sent a comprehensive health insurance plan to Congress. The program would use existing employer-employee plans but would add federal health insurance to it. Under the plan, the average married wage earner would pay $150 a year and the average employer would pay $270. The major provision of the plan would provide for complete payment for any medical bills totalling over $1,500. Opponents of the President's plan feel it doesn't do enough for the poor and elderly and doesn't do anything to stop health costs from climbing steadily, or keep insurance companies from making bigger profits. Supporters argue that this plan will provide health insurance coverage for the people and will avoid socialized medicine. All in all, do you favor the President's plan or not?"

Horticulturist Whitney 'Example Of Vanishing Species'

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

"It has been a real buggy year this year," says Wayne Whitney, extension horticulturist at the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Whitney, who may be the last of the general yard and garden specialists still working actively in the United States, will retire at the end of 1974.

"I have a lot of things I still want to get done so I am really looking forward to it," he said. Began in 1926

Whitney began his career in 1926 working in horticultural plots in Kansas and has been involved in some area of growing plants ranging from the modern day gardens in a bottle to managing an orchard.

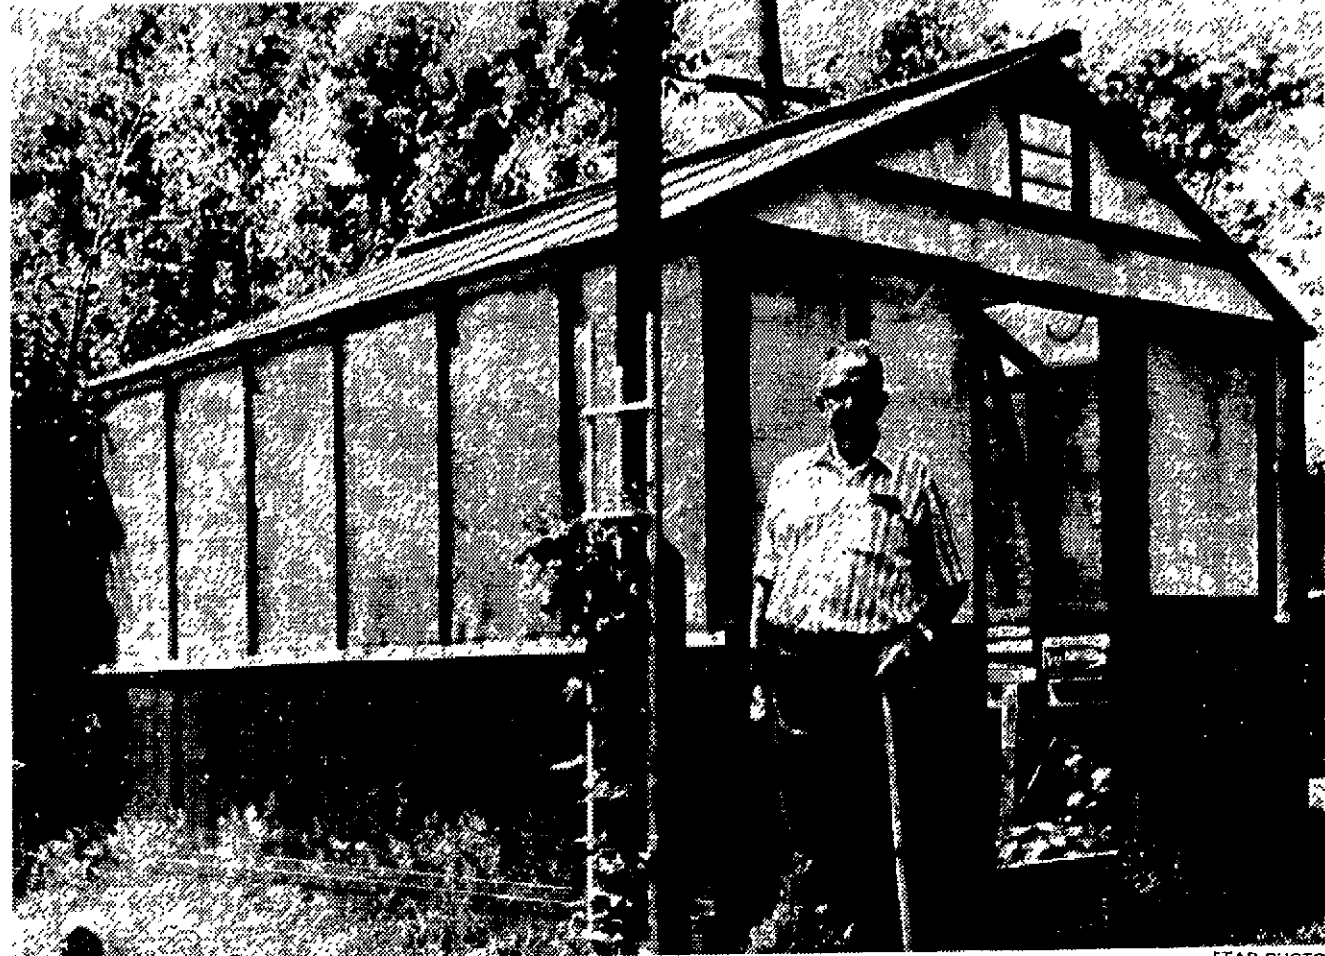

"They started training specialists about the time I got out of school. We had to be generalists in my day, I guess you might say that I am an example of a vanishing species," he said.

Whitney had surgery on his hip a month ago but is back at work visiting farms and gardens with the aid of a cane. "I don't know if I want to give this thing up. It is real handy for changing stations on the television and grabbing things," he said as he used the cane to pull a car door shut.

'Backyard Farmer'
Whitney's long experience with diseases, varieties of lawn and garden plants and the various insects that live on them have made him a vital component of the educational television garden show, "Backyard Farmer."

Identifying unknown apple varieties is a specialty with Whitney who says, "Bring me one when it is ripe so I can taste it and feel it. It is easier to tell then," he said.

Growing Advice
Advice on gardening rolls off Whitney's tongue with ease.

Raspberries . . . thin out the canes by removing the weak ones, so you end up with 10 to 12 per three foot of row.

Strawberries . . . leave a five inch strip of plants every 42 inches and take the rest out of the patch.

Manure . . . the well-rotted kind is an excellent soil conditioner, but for rhubarb and asparagus, you need some that is pretty fresh. There isn't a whole lot of fertility in real old manure. Peaches . . . they grow new fruit only on new growth so prune accordingly.

Apples . . . a lot of varieties only produce a real good crop every other year. Apple drop is due to lack of pollination. The tree is telling you it can't handle that many apples or maybe there is a worm in there.

To Keep You Busy
"You can have a lot of fun with a good garden and yard. It will keep you busy, produce a lot of food and flowers and if you do it right you can drive your neighbors crazy trying to keep up with you," he said.

Whitney practices what he preaches, maintains two bins for compost, has a pile of natural cow fertilizer and a small greenhouse in his backyard.

Whitney likes live flowers better than plastic flowers. "The darn things have ruined the market for peonies," he said.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

There is good news for irrigators who use stream water for raising crops. There is plenty of it in most of the nation this year.

This is also good news for consumers because it is one more indication of an adequate supply of food, but bad news for producers as it almost certainly means lower prices at the farm.

Farmers could stand the lower prices if they were being passed on to the consumers, but evidence that the drop in farm prices hasn't affected store prices is painfully clear to the farmer's wife every time she shops for groceries. Farmers too buy most of their food in the store, contrary to the belief of most city folks.

Veterinary schools are bursting out all over like flowers after a warm spring rain. Several states are suddenly giving long overdue consideration to a school for animal doctors.

Nebraska is just one of several states giving thought to the problem of too many students who don't have facilities available to teach them the courses they need to become vets.

This interest is long overdue; however, it stems in part from a tight supply of vets who are willing to live in a small town and work on large animals. The trend is to live in a large city, charge large fees for small animals and let the farmers fend for themselves.

It seems the shortage of medical assistance in rural areas applies to both human and the animal populations.

We must find ways to hold qualified health care people in rural areas or any expansion in medical or vet colleges will provide little aid.

Everybody shares in the prosperity of agriculture. Pfizer announced that its second quarter dividend would be 19 cents, up 2 cents from the first quarter. When farmers make money those who sell things to farmers also prosper.

With a tightened farm income caused by higher prices for everything farmers buy and lower prices for what they sell, we can expect to see a drop in the income of farm suppliers and those states who base their income on income and sales taxes. . . . Nebraska is one of those states.

Soybean meal stocks on April 1 at processing plants were at record levels. Last year they were at a record low point due to high prices for meal, so we have gone from one extreme to the other in less than a year.

A part of the reason for the stockpiling of meal has been the high price for oil which has been supporting the soybean price for several months.

Livestock producers may be able to buy meal at lower prices (which along with anticipated lower feed grain prices may make life a little less miserable in the coming months), but there is no real sign of prosperity for pork, poultry and beef producers any time soon.

Dairymen too have problems these days. Feed prices are dropping, but so is the price of milk at the farm level so those families that milk cows two times a day seven days a week are getting pinched financially.

Let us remind our farm friends that higher food, gas, electricity, hospital, auto and other expenses are putting the squeeze on their city cousins as well . . . perhaps misery loves company, or don't feel lonesome. You have lots of company.

This isn't strictly a farm type observation, but I am becoming distressed by the number of schools and colleges that are dropping their language departments.

Perhaps it is because I meet a lot more foreign visitors than most Nebraskans do, but I really think that every student in school ought to have a chance to learn a second language.

We Americans are an arrogant nation that thinks others must learn our language if they desire to communicate with us.

With agriculture becoming more dependent on exports and the large number of overseas teams coming to visit our farms, a second language could be downright useful to the farm generation in future years.

If you are interested in land use legislation in Washington, you should know that the various proposals are very much alive and unlikely to go away. Like the old time radio announcers used to say, "keep them cards and letters coming" to your congressmen and senators in Washington.

Horticulturist Whitney 'Example Of Vanishing Species'

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

"It has been a real buggy year this year," says Wayne Whitney, extension horticulturist at the University of Nebraska Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Whitney, who may be the last of the general yard and garden specialists still working actively in the United States, will retire at the end of 1974.

"I have a lot of things I still want to get done so I am really looking forward to it," he said.

Began In 1926

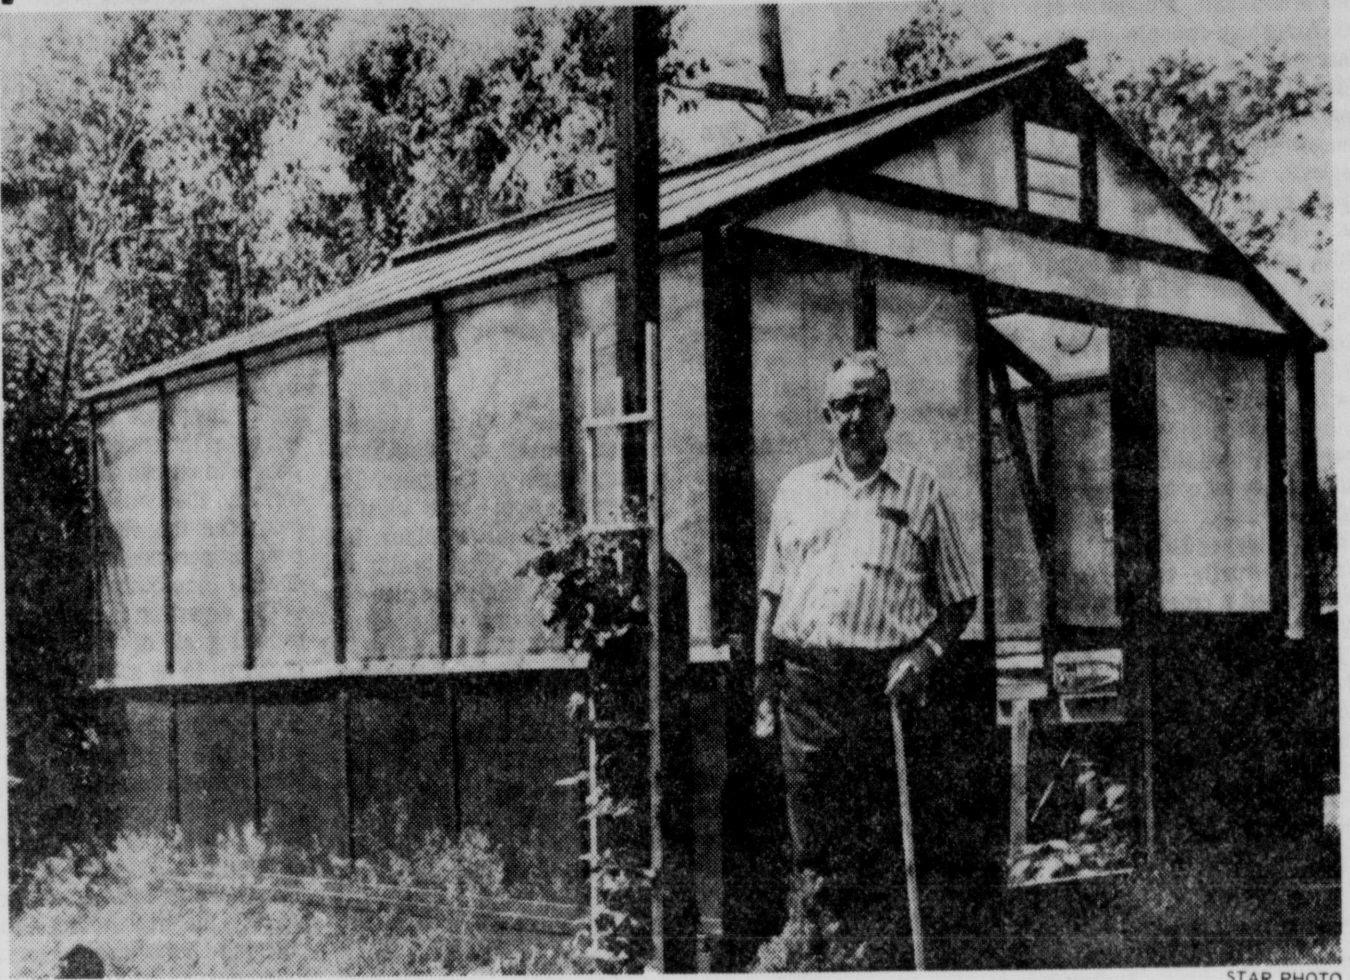

Whitney began his career in 1926 working in horticultural plots in Kansas and has been involved in some area of growing plants ranging from the modern day gardens in a bottle to managing an orchard.

"They started training specialists about the time I got out of school. We had to be generalists in my day, I guess you might say that I am an example of a vanishing species," he said.

Whitney had surgery on his hip a month ago but is back at work visiting farms and gardens with the aid of a cane. "I don't know if I want to give this thing up. It is real handy for changing stations on the television and grabbing things," he said as he used the cane to pull a car door shut.

'Backyard Farmer'

various insects that live on them have made him a vital component of the educational television garden show, "Backyard Farmer."

Identifying unknown apple varieties is a specialty with Whitney who says, "Bring me one when it is ripe so I can taste it and feel it. It is easier to tell then," he said.

Growing Advice

Advice on gardening rolls off Whitney's tongue with ease. Raspberries . . . thin out the canes by removing the weak ones, so you end up with 10 to 12 per three foot of row.

Strawberries . . . leave a five inch strip of plants every 42 inches and take the rest out of the patch.

Manure . . . the well-rotted kind is an excellent soil conditioner, but for rhubarb and asparagus, you need some that is pretty fresh. There isn't a whole lot of fertility in real old manure. Peaches . . . they grow new fruit only on new growth so prune accordingly. Apples . . . a lot of varieties only produce a real good crop every other year. Apple drop is due to lack of pollination. The tree is telling you it can't handle that many apples or maybe there is a worm in there.

To Keep You Busy

"You can have a lot of fun

with a good garden and yard. It will keep you busy, produce a lot of food and flowers and if you do it right you can drive your neighbors crazy trying to keep up with you," he said.

Whitney practices what he preaches, maintains two bins for compost, has a pile of natural cow fertilizer and a small greenhouse in his backyard.

Whitney likes live flowers better than plastic flowers. "The darn things have ruined the market for peonies," he said.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

There is good news for irrigators who use stream water for raising crops. There is plenty of it in most of the nation this year.

This is also good news for consumers because it is one more indication of an adequate supply of food, but bad news for producers as it almost certainly means lower prices at the farm.

Farmers could stand the lower prices if they were being passed on to the consumers, but evidence that the drop in farm prices hasn't affected store prices is painfully clear to the farmer's wife every time she shops for groceries. Farmers too buy most of their food in the store, contrary to the belief of most city folks.

Veterinary schools are bursting out all over like flowers after a warm spring rain. Several states are suddenly giving long overdue consideration to a school for animal doctors.

Nebraska is just one of several states giving thought to the problem of too many students who don't have facilities available to teach them the courses they need to become vets.

This interest is long overdue; however, it stems in part from a tight supply of vets who are willing to live in a small town and work on large animals. The trend is to live in a large city, charge large fees for small animals and let the farmers fend for themselves.

It seems the shortage of medical assistance in rural areas applies to both human and the animal populations.

We must find ways to hold qualified health care people in rural areas or any expansion in medical or vet colleges will provide little aid.

Everybody shares in the prosperity of agriculture. Pfizer announced that its second quarter dividend would be 19 cents, up 2 cents from the first quarter. When farmers make money those who sell things to farmers also prosper.

With a tightened farm income caused by higher prices for everything farmers buy and lower prices for what they sell, we can expect to see a drop in the income of farm suppliers and those states who base their income on income and sales taxes. . . . Nebraska is one of those states.

Soybean meal stocks on April 1 at processing plants were at record levels. Last year they were at a record low point due to high prices for meal, so we have gone from one extreme to the other in less than a year.

A part of the reason for the stockpiling of meal has been the high price for oil which has been supporting the soybean price for several months.

Livestock producers may be able to buy meal at lower prices (which along with anticipated lower feed grain prices may make life a little less miserable in the coming months), but there is no real sing of prosperity for pork, poultry and beef producers any time soon.

Dairymen too have problems these days. Feed prices are dropping, but so is the price of milk at the farm level so those families that milk cows two times a day seven days a week are getting pinched financially.

Let us remind our farm friends that higher food, gas, electricity, hospital, auto and other expenses are putting the squeeze on their city cousins as well . . . perhaps misery loves company, or don't feel lonesome. You have lots of company.

This isn't strictly a farm type observation, but I am becoming distressed by the number of schools and colleges that are dropping their language departments.

Perhaps it is because I meet a lot more foreign visitors than most Nebraskans do, but I really think that every student in school ought to have a chance to learn a second language. We Americans are an arrogant nation that thinks others must learn out language if they desire to communicate with us.

With agriculture becoming more dependent on exports and the large number of overseas teams coming to visit our farms, a second language could be downright useful to the farm generation in future years.

If you are interested in land use legislation in Washington, you should know that the various proposals are very much alive and unlikely to go away. Like the old time radio announcers used to say, "keep them cards and letters coming" to your congressmen and senators in Washington.

Zephyr Owner Collects Trains

Denver (AP) — When Dick McKinley was a little boy, he used to go down to the station to watch the trains come in.

Now, McKinley is 43 years old and he's buying trains instead of just watching them.

He's already bought two old trains and is looking for a third.

"I've loved trains since I was a little kid," says McKinley, a mattress manufacturer. "My dad used to take my brother and me down to the depot every Sunday to watch the trains come in. They used to run 50 or 60 of them in and out of Denver every day."

Nebraska Zephyr

In July 1970, McKinley bought a used diesel locomotive and five passenger cars from a Burlington line train known as the Nebraska Zephyr. He already owned the Denver Zephyr.

McKinley planned to run the train to ski areas in the Rocky Mountains or for regular passenger service.

But he ran into financial problems.

"I didn't have enough capital to fix up the train myself, so I had to pursue a loan," McKinley explains. "But the bank wouldn't finance me until I got railroad approval to run the train. And no railroad would give me the approval until they knew I had the money to fix up the train and get it running."

Sold To Banker

Stymied, he decided to sell the train, being kept at Union Station at a cost of $150 a month. In February, he sold it for $80,000 to a Kansas City banker, Alexander Barket, who also bought 12 cars of the old Denver Zephyr from McKinley in 1968.

McKinley is interested in buying another train. "I got a bid sheet from the Burlington the other day," he says. "They have some cars for sale in Chicago. I plan to go look at them, although they're older commuter cars and I'm not sure how good shape they're in."

Early Diesel

"I probably won't buy a locomotive this time. I bought the engine to the Nebraska Zephyr because it was one of the early diesels and was one of only two in working order in the country."

McKinley won't say how much

he paid for his first two trains. But he thinks there's a profit in such ventures, particularly these days.

"With the current gas shortage, there's quite a bit of interest in running trains," he says. "When airlines have to cut back on flights because of fuel shortages, one of the first places they'll cut back are the pleasure flights, such as to ski resorts. Train service to those resorts would be an economical substitute."

McKinley's wife seems quietly bemused by his activities. "She always thought I was a little crazy," he says. "She still does."

2 One-Car Crashes Boost Highway Toll

By The Associated Press

Two more persons have died in Nebraska traffic, both in accidents involving one car.

Barbara B. Wolf, 21, of Omaha, was killed late Saturday night in a one-car crash in Omaha.

Police said she was a passenger in a car driven by Russell Wolfe, 25, of Sterling, Colo., when the car apparently went out of control while trying to pass another vehicle and struck a tree.

Wolfe was hospitalized in serious condition Sunday. Police said the two were not related.

Forrest C. Hannesson, 41, of Rushville, was killed late Saturday night, the State Patrol said, when his car left the road and flipped over on its top.

The accident happened northeast of Chadron on Route 20.

The deaths raised the Nebraska highway fatality toll for the year to 137 compared with 167 a year ago.

Survivor Of Mishap Reported As Critical

Omaha (AP)—A boy who survived an auto accident that claimed four lives was reported in critical condition at hospital Sunday.

The Douglas County sheriff's office said Dennis Eugene Blackledge, 13, apparently waited through much of the night Friday before he was rescued. He was spotted by a milkman.

The accident occurred when the car in which he was riding overturned at the bottom of a 20-foot ravine after it missed a turn at a construction site.

Killed in the crash were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Blackledge; a brother, Brian, 12, and a friend, Kevin O'Conner, 18, of East Omaha.

Officials of a construction company said flashing lights, detour signs and a reduced speed warning were at the site of the crash.

Omaha (AP) — Henry Holmes, 40, of Omaha, died at a hospital Sunday shortly after police said he exchanged gunfire with an officer in front of Holmes' house. The patrolman, John Patrick Car Jr., 25, suffered powder burns about the eyes.

Police said that Car tried to stop Holmes for a check and that Holmes escaped by car to his home and went inside.

Car approached, police said, and Holmes came outside the house and fired two shots at point blank range.

Car returned the fire, striking Holmes in the abdomen.

Pick a locksmith in the

How to select an air conditioner.

You can save money on the original purchase and the operating cost of your air conditioner by carefully selecting the unit you buy. Here are a few ideas that will help you choose and operate an air conditioner economically.

Is it the right size?

Buying a unit that is rated at the right cooling capacity for your needs is important. A unit that is too small won't keep you cool enough. One that is too large will lower the temperature faster but leave you cold and clammy because it will not stay on long enough to remove excess humidity. An oversized unit will also cost you more to buy and add dollars to your electric bill.

To be sure you select the proper size air conditioner, have your dealer compute the cooling capacity you will need for the room or rooms you want to air condition.

Is it efficient?

Some air conditioners use a lot less electricity than others to cool the same amount of space. And there is a simple formula you can use to determine how efficient an air conditioner really is. Just divide the rated BTU capacity of a unit by the number of watts it will consume. Both of these numbers appear on the rating plate attached to air conditioners.

When you divide the BTU capacity by the number of watts required, you will get a number known as the Energy Efficiency Ratio (EER). The EER number is usually between 5 and 10. The higher the EER number, the more economical the air conditioner is to operate. It'll pay you to make some comparisons of the EER of various models before you buy.

Lincoln Electric System recommends you choose an air conditioner with an EER number of 7 or more for lowest operating cost. Units with an EER of 5 or 6 are less efficient and more costly to operate.

Using the fan on your air conditioner will save you money.

Most central and window air conditioners may be operated without using the compressor. This allows you to use the fan in these units to provide economical ventilation that will reduce the need for cooling.

Take advantage of cool outside temperatures.

When the outside temperature drops below the temperature inside, open your windows so that inside heat can escape. Close your home tightly during the hottest part of the day and keep solar heat out by closing drapes, blinds or curtains of windows exposed to direct sunlight.

Insulation is important.

Just as insulation saves on your heating bill by keeping warmth in, proper insulation also pays summer dividends by keeping heat out. A minimum of six inches of insulation in the attic and 3½ inches in outside walls is recommended.

Remember...electricity is valuable.
Please don't waste it.

The Douglas County sheriff's office said Dennis Eugene Blackledge, 13, apparently waited through much of the night Friday before he was rescued. He was spotted by a milkman.

The accident occurred when the car in which he was riding overturned at the bottom of a 20-foot ravine after it missed a turn at a construction site.

Killed in the crash were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Blackledge; a brother, Brian, 12, and a friend, Kevin O'Conner, 18, of East Omaha.

Indians Interested In Old Fort Omaha

Omaha (AP) — Indian leaders are interested in obtaining at least a part of old Fort Omaha, even if it is necessary to go through Congress and the courts.

Indian spokesman Richard Maggart said he wants to work with other groups in obtaining at least parts of the fort, which has been declared government surplus, for health, educational and recreation use.

The Metropolitan Technical Community College also is reported making a strong bid to obtain the entire fort from the federal government.

Plans are to use it as a college campus, where 5,000 to 7,000 students annually would study in a few years, H. L. McCoy, assistant to the president of the college, said.

There were indications the city and county government, which had showed interest in obtaining the fort, are now less than enthusiastic. The annual maintenance cost is an item.

Maggart said "if it looks like we're going to be shut out completely, we'll go through Congress and the courts."

Maggart, executive director of the Indian Center Industries Association, said attorneys were working on the case, and contacts have been made with South Dakota Sen. James Abourezk, as well as Sens. Carl Curtis and Congressman John McCollister of Nebraska.

"If we're not allowed a share, we'll request that the fort be pulled out of surplus and that federal legislation be passed to grant the area back to the Indian people," he said.

McCoy said the school is asking for the entire fort, but wants to work with the state and county historical societies, which are interested in the area.

The government has set a July 4 deadline for formal land use applications to the General Services Administration.

How to select an air conditioner.

You can save money on the original purchase and the operating cost of your air conditioner by carefully selecting the unit you buy. Here are a few ideas that will help you choose and operate an air conditioner economically.

various models before you buy.

Lincoln Electric System recommends you choose an air conditioner with an EER number of 7 or more for lowest operating cost. Units with an EER of 5 or 6 are less efficient and more costly to operate.

Is it the right size?

Buying a unit that is rated at the right cooling capacity for your needs is important. A unit that is too small won't keep you cool enough. One that is too large will lower the temperature faster but leave you cold and clammy because it will not stay on long enough to remove excess humidity. An oversized unit will also cost you more to buy and add dollars to your electric bill.

To be sure you select the proper size air conditioner, have your dealer compute the cooling capacity you will need for the room or rooms you want to air condition.

Is it efficient?

Some air conditioners use a lot less electricity than others to cool the same amount of space. And there is a simple formula you can use to determine how efficient an air conditioner really is. Just divide the rated BTU capacity of a unit by the number of watts it will consume. Both of these numbers appear on the rating plate attached to air conditioners.

When you divide the BTU capacity by the number of watts required, you will get a number known as the Energy Efficiency Ratio (EER). The EER number is usually between 5 and 10. The higher the EER number, the more economical the air conditioner is to operate. It'll pay you to make some comparisons of the EER of

Using the fan on your air conditioner will save you money.

Most central and window air conditioners may be operated without using the compressor. This allows you to use the fan in these units to provide economical ventilation that will reduce the need for cooling.

Take advantage of cool outside temperatures.

When the outside temperature drops below the temperature inside, open your windows so that inside heat can escape. Close your home tightly during the hottest part of the day and keep solar heat out by closing drapes, blinds or curtains of windows exposed to direct sunlight.

Insulation is important.

Just as insulation saves on your heating bill by keeping warmth in, proper insulation also pays summer dividends by keeping heat out. A minimum of six inches of insulation in the attic and 3½ inches in outside walls is recommended.

Remember...electricity is valuable. Please don't waste it.

Pack a peck of pickles this summer. Staff writer Linda Olig tells you how in today's articles. Tuesday she will cover jam and jelly making.

Pick Proper Pickling Process

You can get into a real pickle if the correct pickle-processing procedures are not followed.

That's what Esther Kriefels Wyant, Lancaster County extension agent, said at the third in a series of classes on preserving garden-fresh fruits and vegetables.

If made correctly, pickle products can truly add pizzazz to meals the year around. And all it takes is a bit of time packing pickles when the cucumbers are fresh from the vine.

Pickling is the method of "preserving foods by the use of vinegar or acid and salt," the extension agent said, pointing out that there are four basic classes and characteristics of pickles:

— Brined, or fermented, pickles requiring a curing period of at least three weeks and a "definite technique" for keeping the brine (salt and vinegar solution) at the proper level.

The fermentation causes the color of the cucumber to change from a bright green to olive, yellowish green; the inside becomes translucent in appearance; both the skin and inside become tender, yet firm.

— Fresh-pack or quick-process, a quick and easy method producing excellent results. In this process, the vegetables are brined for several hours or overnight, then drained and combined with boiling vinegar, spices and other seasonings.

— Fruit pickles, using slightly immature or under-ripe produce.

— Relishes and chutneys, made from ground or chopped vegetable and/or fruit mixtures.

"One of the most important things (in making pickles) is to have the proper proportions of good quality ingredients and follow the directions correctly," Mrs. Wyant observed.

— Certain varieties of fruits and vegetables are strictly for pickling. Those recommended for table use are not the best for pickling.

The fruits and vegetables should be tender, young and slightly under ripe — and of uniform size. To prepare them for pickling, wash thoroughly with a vegetable brush and remove the blossom end — this is a must.

— Pickling salt, which is pure granulated and without additives, should be used. Iodized salt may cause the pickles to turn dark.

— Since not all commercial vinegars are of the same strength, read the label to be certain the strongest possible vinegar is used. The acid content should be from 40 to 60 grains (4 to 6%). Either cider or white vinegar may be used; the cider is more mellow, the white sharper and more acidic. However, white vinegar is especially recommended for pickling light-colored vegetables or fruit.

— White (beet or cane) sugar is recommended for most recipes. Do not use brown sugar unless the recipe specifically calls for it.

— It is best to use fresh spices since the quality deteriorates rapidly. Here's a hint: use dill seed when it is ripe and light brown. If fresh dill seed is not available, one tablespoon commercial dill seed equals three heads.

— Soft water must be used when pickling. The minerals in hard water can weaken the brine. In an area with hard water, such as Lincoln, a pickle packer may catch rain water, purchase distilled water or process his/her own.

To make soft water from hard, let the water boil 15 minutes. Let it stand 24 hours. Remove the scum (collection of minerals). Ladle the water from the pan (additional minerals will have settled to the bottom). Add one tablespoon vinegar per gallon water. Voila! You have soft water.

— Some recipes, particularly Grandmother's favorites, often call for lime, alum or grape or cherry leaves. However, those additional ingredients often are unnecessary if good ingredients and an up-to-date procedures are used.

Necessary equipment includes:

— A brining container. The right type is a must; salt can corrode metal. Among the recommended containers are those made of stoneware, pottery, glass, unchipped enamel and, perhaps, plastic.

— A pot for heating the syrups: unchipped enamel, stainless steel, aluminum or glass.

— Measuring utensils.

— Water-bath canner.

— Canning jars and lids.

— Kitchen scale.

When using the brining method, one in which the cucumbers must remain for a period of time, be sure to weight the cucumbers so they are completely immersed (try an inverted plate with a canning jar on top). You can also, for the first few days, add new cucumbers to the brine. When this is done, however, you must be certain the salt solution is kept at a certain level, Mrs. Wyant pointed out. To test for proper proportions, try floating an egg on the brine — the egg will float atop the salt water. If additional salt is to be added, dissolve it first in a little water.

At the end of the brining period, cut one of the cucumbers. If no white spots are evident and if it is translucent, the curing process has been conducted properly.

In addition, scum may form on the brine solution. This must be skimmed off every few days.

Procedures for successful pickling are as follows:

— Fill the preheated jars. Avoid packing too tightly.

— Cover with brine or syrup.

— Leave the recommended head space, according to recipe specifications.

— Wipe the rim and threads of the jar.

— Place a preheated flat lid on the jar and screw on the band tightly.

— Process in a boiling water bath for the recommended period of time (begin timing immediately after placing jars in water). This destroys organisms that cause spoilage.

— Carefully remove the jars from the hot-water bath, using a jar lifter so as not to destroy the seal.

— Cool the jars, top side up, several inches apart in a draft-free area for 12 to 24 hours.

— Check the seals; wipe the jars clean and label with name or product and date.

— Store the canned pickles in a dark, dry, cool place for at least six weeks prior to eating.

"Always be alert for sight of spoilage," Mrs. Wyant advised. Before opening the jar, examine it closely. A bulging lid or leakage may mean the contents are spoiled.

Other signs of spoilage are spurting liquid, mold, disagreeable odor, change in color, usual softness, mushiness or slipperiness. If there is the slightest indication of spoilage, do not taste the product.

Signs of poor-quality pickles and their causes are:

— Shriveling, a result of overcooking, overprocessing, or too strong a vinegar, sugar, or salt solution from the very beginning.

— Hollowness may be caused by poorly developed cucumbers, too long a period between picking and pickling; too rapid fermentation, too strong or too weak a brine.

— Soft or slippery pickles generally are the result of too little salt or acid, scum scattered through the brine, the cucumbers being uncovered during fermentation insufficient heating treatment, poor sealing or moldy garlic or spices.

— Darkness may be caused by use of ground spices, too much spice, iodized salt, overcooking, minerals in the water or use of iron utensils.

Recipes To Pickle By

"If I were making pickles, I would use the fresh-pack method," said Esther Kriefels Wyant, Lancaster County extension agent.

One time-tested recipe for fresh-pack dill pickles, published by the U.S. Department of agriculture is:

Fresh-Pack Dill Pickles
17 to 18 lbs. cucumbers, three to five inches long

2 gal. 5% brine (¾ c. pure granulated salt per gal. water)
6 c. vinegar
¾ c. pure granulated salt
¼ c. sugar
9 c. water

2 T. whole mixed pickling spice
2 t. per qt. jar whole mustard seed
1 or 2 cloves garlic per qt. jar, if desired
3 heads fresh dill or 1 T. dill seed per qt. jar

Wash cucumbers thoroughly; scrub with vegetable brush; drain. Cover with the brine. Let set overnight; drain.

Combine vinegar, salt, sugar, water and mixed pickling spices that are tied in a clean, thin, white cloth; heat to boiling. Pack cucumbers into clean, hot quart jars. Add mustard seed, dill plant or seed and garlic to each jar; cover with boiling liquid to within ½ inch of top of jar. Adjust jar lids.

Process in boiling water for 21 minutes (start to count the processing time as soon as hot jars are placed into the actively boiling water).

Remove jars and complete seals if necessary. Set jars upright, several inches apart on a wire rack to cool. Makes 7 quarts.

And here are a few other recipes to try:

Watermelon Pickles
3 qts. watermelon rind (about 6 lbs. unpared, or ½ large melon)

¾ c. salt
3 qts. water
2 qts. (2 trays) ice cubes
9 c. sugar
3 c. white vinegar
3 c. water
1 T. (about 48) whole cloves
6 1-inch pieces stick cinnamon
1 lemon, thinly sliced, with seeds removed

Pare rind and all pink edges from watermelon. Cut into 1-inch squares or fancy shapes, as desired. Cover with brine made by mixing the salt with 3 qts. cold water. Add ice cubes. Let stand 5 or 6 hours.

Drain; rinse in cold water. Cover with cold water and cook until fork tender, about 10 minutes (do not overcook). Drain.

Combine sugar, vinegar, water and spices (tied in a clean, thin white cloth). Boil 5 minutes and pour over the watermelon with spices; add lemon slices. Let stand overnight.

Heat watermelon in syrup to boiling and cook until watermelon is translucent (about 10 minutes). Pack hot pickles loosely into hot, clean pint jars. To each jar add 1 piece of stick cinnamon from spice bag; cover with boiling syrup to ½ inch of top of jar. Adjust jar lids.

Process in boiling water for 6 minutes (start to count processing time when water begins to boil). Remove jars and complete seals, if necessary. Set jars upright, several inches apart, on a wire rack to cool.

The sugar may be reduced to 8 c. if a less sweet pickle is desired. Makes 4 to 5 pints.

(Red or green food coloring may be added to the syrup. Keep watermelon rind in plastic bags in refrigerator until enough rinds for one recipe are collected.)

Crosscut Pickle Slices

Drain and remove garlic cloves. Combine sugar, spices and vinegar; heat just to boiling. Add cucumbers and onion slices and heat 5 minutes. Pack hot pickles loosely into pint jars to ½ inch of top. Wash cucumbers and slice into ½ or ¾-inch slices; discard ends. Add onions and garlic. Mix in salt thoroughly and cover with crushed ice or ice cubes. Let stand for 3 hours. Drain and remove garlic cloves. Combine sugar, spices and vinegar; heat just to boiling. Add cucumbers and onion slices and heat 5 minutes. Pack hot pickles loosely into pint jars to ½ inch of top. Seal and process in boiling water for 5 minutes. Makes 7 pints.

Dilled Green Beans
4 lbs. (about 4 qts.) green beans, whole
¼ t. per pint jar hot red pepper, crushed
½ t. per pint jar whole mustard seed
½ t. per pint jar dill seed
1 clove per pint jar garlic
5 c. (1 ¼ qts.) vinegar
5 c. water
½ c. salt

Wash beans thoroughly; drain and cut into lengths to fill pint jars. Pack beans into clean, hot jars; add pepper, mustard seed, dill seed, and garlic.

Combine vinegar, water and salt; heat to boiling. Pour boiling liquid over beans, filling to ½ inch of top of jar. Adjust jar lids.

Process in boiling water for 6 minutes (start to count processing time as soon as water in canner returns to boiling). Remove jars and complete seals if necessary. Set jars upright, several inches apart, on a wire rack to cool.

Watermelon Pickles
3 qts. watermelon rind (about 6 lbs. unpared, or ½ large melon)

¾ c. salt
3 qts. water
2 qts. (2 trays) ice cubes
9 c. sugar
3 c. white vinegar
3 c. water
1 T. (about 48) whole cloves
6 1-inch pieces stick cinnamon
1 lemon, thinly sliced, with seeds removed

Pare rind and all pink edges from watermelon. Cut into 1-inch squares or fancy shapes, as desired. Cover with brine made by mixing the salt with 3 qts. cold water. Add ice cubes. Let stand 5 or 6 hours.

Drain; rinse in cold water. Cover with cold water and cook until fork tender, about 10 minutes (do not overcook). Drain.

Combine sugar, vinegar, water and spices (tied in a clean, thin white cloth). Boil 5 minutes and pour over the watermelon with spices; add lemon slices. Let stand overnight.

Heat watermelon in syrup to boiling and cook until watermelon is translucent (about 10 minutes). Pack hot pickles loosely into hot, clean pint jars. To each jar add 1 piece of stick cinnamon from spice bag; cover with boiling syrup to ½ inch of top of jar. Adjust jar lids.

Process in boiling water for 6 minutes (start to count processing time when water begins to boil). Remove jars and complete seals, if necessary. Set jars upright, several inches apart, on a wire rack to cool.

The sugar may be reduced to 8 c. if a less sweet pickle is desired. Makes 4 to 5 pints.

(Red or green food coloring may be added to the syrup. Keep watermelon rind in plastic bags in refrigerator until enough rinds for one recipe are collected.)

Pack a peck of pickles this summer. Staff writer Linda Olig tells you how in today's articles. Tuesday she will cover jam and jelly making.

Pick Proper Pickling Process

You can get into a real pickle if the correct pickle-processing procedures are not followed.

That's what Esther Kriefels Wyant, Lancaster County extension agent, said at the third in a series of classes on preserving garden-fresh fruits and vegetables.

If made correctly, pickle products can truly add pizzazz to meals the year around. And all it takes is a bit of time packing pickles when the cucumbers are fresh from the vine.

Pickling is the method of "preserving foods by the use of vinegar or acid and salt," the extension agent said, pointing out that there are four basic classes and characteristics of pickles:

— Brined, or fermented, pickles requiring a curing period of at least three weeks and a "definite technique" for keeping the brine (salt and vinegar solution) at the proper level.

The fermentation causes the color of the cucumber to change from a bright green to olive, yellowish green; the inside becomes translucent in appearance; both the skin and inside become tender, yet firm.

— Fresh-pack or quick-process, a quick and easy method producing excellent results. In this process, the vegetables are brined for several hours or overnight, then drained and combined with boiling vinegar, spices and other seasonings.

— Fruit pickles, using slightly immature or under-ripe produce.

— Relishes and chutneys, made from ground or chopped vegetable and/or fruit mixtures. "One of the most important things (in making pickles) is to have the proper proportions of good quality ingredients and follow the directions correctly," Mrs. Wyant observed.

— Certain varieties of fruits and vegetables are strictly for pickling. Those recommended for table use are not the best for pickling.

The fruits and vegetables should be tender, young and slightly under ripe — and of uniform size. To prepare them for pickling, wash thoroughly with a vegetable brush and remove the blossom end — this is a must.

— Pickling salt, which is pure granulated and without additives, should be used. Iodized salt may cause the pickles to turn dark.

— Since not all commercial vinegars are of the same strength, read the label to be certain the strongest possible vinegar is used. The acid content should be from 40 to 60 grains (4 to 6%). Either cider or white vinegar may be used; the cider is more mellow, the white sharper and more acidic. However, white vinegar is especially recommended for pickling light-colored vegetables or fruit.

— White (beet or cane) sugar is recommended for most recipes. Do not use brown sugar unless the recipe specifically calls for it.

— It is best to use fresh spices since the quality deteriorates rapidly. Here's a hint: use dill seed when it is ripe and light brown. If fresh dill seed is not available, one tablespoon commercial dill seed equals three heads.

— Soft water must be used when pickling. The minerals in hard water can weaken the brine. In an area with hard water, such as Lincoln, a pickle packer may catch rain water, purchase distilled water or process his/her own.

To make soft water from hard, let the water boil 15 minutes. Let it stand 24 hours. Remove the scum (collection of minerals). Ladle the water from the pan (additional minerals will have settled to the bottom). Add one tablespoon vinegar per gallon water. Voila! You have soft water.

— Some recipes, particularly Grandmother's favorites, often call for lime, alum or grape or cherry leaves. However, those additional ingredients often are unnecessary if good ingredients and an up-to-date procedures are used.

Necessary equipment includes:

— A brining container. The right type is a must; salt can corrode metal. Among the recommended containers are those made of stoneware, pottery, glass, unchipped enamel and, perhaps, plastic.

— A pot for heating the syrups: unchipped enamel, stainless steel, aluminum or glass.

— Measuring utensils.

— Water-bath canner.

— Canning jars and lids.

— Kitchen scale.

When using the brining method, one in which the cucumbers must remain for a period of time, be sure to weight the cucumbers so they are completely immersed (try an inverted plate with a canning jar on top). You can also, for the first few days, add new cucumbers to the brine. When this is done, however, you must be certain the salt solution is kept at a certain level, Mrs. Wyant pointed out. To test for proper proportions, try floating an egg on the brine — the egg will float atop the salt water. If additional salt is to be added, dissolve it first in a little water.

At the end of the brining period, cut one of the cucumbers. If no white spots are evident and if it is translucent, the curing process has been conducted properly.

In addition, scum may form on the brine solution. This must be skimmed off every few days.

Procedures for successful pickling are as follows:

— Fill the preheated jars. Avoid packing too tightly.

— Cover with brine or syrup.

— Leave the recommended head space, according to recipe specifications.

PICKLING TAKES... some special equipment. Mrs. Wyant (right) explains to Mrs. Ken Tenhulzen.

— Place a preheated flat lid on the jar and screw on the band tightly.

— Process in a boiling water bath for the recommended period of time (begin timing immediately after placing jars in water). This destroys organisms that cause spoilage.

— Carefully remove the jars from the hot-water bath, using a jar lifter so as not to destroy the seal.

— Cool the jars, top side up, several inches apart in a draft-free area for 12 to 24 hours.

— Check the seals; wipe the jars clean and label with name or product and date.

— Store the canned pickles in a dark, dry, cool place for at least six weeks prior to eating.

"Always be alert for sight of spoilage," Mrs. Wyant advised. Before opening the jar, examine it closely. A bulging lid or leakage may mean the contents are spoiled.

Other signs of spoilage are spurting liquid, mold, disagreeable odor, change in color, usual softness, mushiness or slipperiness. If there is the slightest indication of spoilage, do not taste the product.

Signs of poor-quality pickles and their causes are:

— Shriveling, a result of overcooking, overprocessing, or too strong a vinegar, sugar, or salt solution from the very beginning.

— Hollowness may be caused by poorly developed cucumbers, too long a period between picking and pickling; too rapid fermentation, too strong or too weak a brine.

— Soft or slippery pickles generally are the result of too little salt or acid, scum scattered through the brine, the cucumbers being uncovered during fermentation insufficient heating treatment, poor sealing or moldy garlic or spices.

— Darkness may be caused by use of ground spices, too much spice, iodized salt, overcooking, minerals in the water or use of iron utensils.

Recipes To Pickle By

"If I were making pickles, I would use the fresh-pack method," said Esther Kriefels Wyant, Lancaster County extension agent.

Fresh-Pack Dill Pickles

17 to 18 lbs. cucumbers, three to five inches long

2 gal. 5% brine (¾ c. pure granulated salt per gal. water)

6 c. vinegar.

¾ c. pure granulated salt

¼ c. sugar

9 c. water

2 T. whole mixed pickling spice

2 t. per qt. jar whole mustard seed

1 or 2 cloves garlic per qt. jar, if desired

3 heads fresh dill or 1 T. dill seed per qt. jar

Wash cucumbers thoroughly; scrub with vegetable brush; drain. Cover with the brine. Let set overnight; drain.

Combine vinegar, salt, sugar, water and mixed pickling spices that are tied in a clean, thin, white cloth; heat to boiling. Pack cucumbers into clean, hot quart jars. Add mustard seed, dill plant or seed and garlic to each jar; cover with boiling liquid to within ½ inch of top of jar. Adjust jar lids.

Process in boiling water for 21 minutes (start to count processing time as soon as hot jars are placed into the actively boiling water).

Remove jars and complete seals if necessary. Set jars upright, several inches apart on a wire rack to cool. Makes 7 quarts.

And here are a few other recipes to try:

Watermelon Pickles

3 qts. watermelon rind (about 6 lbs. unpared, or ½ large melon)

¾ c. salt
3 qts. water
2 qts. (2 trays) ice cubes
9 c. sugar
3 c. white vinegar
3 c. water

1 T. (about 48) whole cloves
6 1-inch pieces stick cinnamon
1 lemon, thinly sliced, with seeds removed

Pare rind and all pink edges from watermelon. Cut into 1-inch squares or fancy shapes, as desired. Cover with brine made by mixing the salt with 3 qts. cold water. Add ice cubes. Let stand 5 or 6 hours.

Drain; rinse in cold water. Cover with cold water and cook until fork tender, about 10 minutes (do not overcook). Drain.

Combine sugar, vinegar, water and spices (tied in a clean, thin white cloth). Boil 5 minutes and pour over the watermelon with spices; add lemon slices. Let stand overnight.

Heat watermelon in syrup to boiling and cook until watermelon is translucent (about 10 minutes). Pack hot pickles loosely into hot, clean pint jars. To each jar add 1 piece of stick cinnamon from spice bag; cover with boiling syrup to ½ inch of top of jar. Adjust jar lids.

Process in boiling water for 6 minutes (start to count processing time when water begins to boil). Remove jars and complete seals, if necessary. Set jars upright, several inches apart, on a wire rack to cool.

The sugar may be reduced to 8 c. if a less sweet pickle is desired. Makes 4 to 5 pints.

(Red or green food coloring may be added to the syrup. Keep watermelon rind in plastic bags in refrigerator until enough rinds for one recipe are collected.)

Crosscut Pickle Slices

4 qts. medium size, sliced

1½ c. sliced onions
2 large garlic cloves
1/3 c. salt
2 trays ice cubes
4½ c. sugar
1½ t. turmeric
1½ t. celery seed
2 T. mustard seed
3 c. vinegar

Wash cucumbers and slice into ¼ or ½-inch slices; discard ends. Add onions and garlic. Mix in salt thoroughly and cover with crushed ice or ice cubes. Let stand for 3 hours. Drain and remove garlic cloves. Combine sugar, spices and vinegar; heat just to boiling. Add cucumbers and onion slices and heat 5 minutes. Pack hot pickles loosely into pint jars to ½ inch of top. Seal and process in boiling water for 5 minutes. Makes 7 pints.

Dilled Green Beans

4 lbs. (about 4 qts.) green beans, whole

¼ t. per pint jar hot red pepper, crushed

½ t. per pint jar whole mustard seed

½ t. per pint jar dill seed

1 clove per pint jar garlic

5 c. (1¼ qts.) vinegar

5 c. water

½ c. salt

Wash beans thoroughly; drain and cut into lengths to fill pint jars. Pack beans into clean, hot jars; add pepper, mustard seed, dill seed, and garlic.

Combine vinegar, water and salt; heat to boiling. Pour boiling liquid over beans, filling to ½ inch of top of jar. Adjust jar lids.

Process in boiling water for 6 minutes (start to count processing time as soon as water in canner returns to boiling). Remove jars and complete seals if necessary. Set jars upright, several inches apart, on a wire rack to cool.

If Pregnant, Marry Now

DEAR ABBY: Bob (not his real name) and I have been engaged since last Christmas. The problem is I am pretty sure I am pregnant, and my wedding is four months away. I probably shouldn't wear a white gown and veil, but I already bought mine, and if I can get into it I'm going to wear it.

I haven't told anybody but Bob, but I may have to tell my mother because I feel lousy in the morning, and she wasn't born yesterday.

If I'm pregnant, would it be okay to go ahead with the church wedding like I planned? We would tell people afterwards that the baby was premature. Rush your answer to me.

SUE (NOT MY REAL NAME)

DEAR SUE: First, see a doctor. If you're pregnant, make the wedding simple and soon. And don't count on fooling anybody who can count to nine.

DEAR ABBY: You are, once again, absolutely wrong. You recently advised a reader to fall for one of the oldest tricks in the book — to pay for more gas than she asked for simply because the attendant "made a mistake" and put an extra dollar's worth in her tank.

True, occasionally an attendant does make a mistake, but he is in business, and if it's his mistake he should bear the loss.

Would you pay the telephone company for a long distance call you didn't make but was billed to your number?

By now you know I am a lawyer. I doubt if you will print this, but if you do, please correct my spelling. I am too busy trying to persuade my clients that the legal advice they got from their barber, mechanic, plumber, garbageman, friend-who-had-a-similar problem and columnist is not really the law, not always entirely correct, and is very seldom complete and/or accurate.

UPSET

DEAR UPSET: C'mon. The principle involved in that "dollar's-worth-of-gas" letter must have eluded you. The customer said she'd go home to get another dollar and bring it back. She never returned. Then her child wrote to ask me what Mother should have done. I said: "Since she promised to return with the dollar, she should have!"

You're right. I wouldn't pay for a long distance call billed to me that I didn't make simply because that call is not a commodity I would eventually use. (Not so with the gas already in my tank.)

And if you write again, please include your name and address. I have more to say to you than I can fit into this column.

DEAR ABBY: I went with a beautiful 22-year-old girl for eight months. (I'm 28). She came on like a lily white touch-me-not virgin. She even slapped my face once, when I let my hands get too familiar with her.

I never came right out and asked her if she was a virgin because from her actions I was sure she was. I was so glad she had "saved herself" for marriage because that was the one thing I wanted in a wife.

Well, after we were married I found out that she lied to me. She refuses to talk about it, and I feel that I have been tricked. I think she withheld the truth from me because she knew I'd never marry her if I knew. I was really crazy about this girl, and she seemed to care for me, too, but now everything is ruined.

We aren't getting along at all, and it's all because she deceived me about her virginity. It's gotten to the point where I feel divorce is the only answer. Please help me.

CHEATED

DEAR CHEATED: She didn't lie to you, you jumped to a conclusion. Too bad you place such a high priority on virginity because there is no way she can get hers back. However, "never have loved before" isn't the most important thing a woman can bring to a marriage.

Her past is her business, and she owes you no explanations, so if you want to save your marriage, get some counseling.

Wedding, Engagement Changes

A change in policy on engagement and wedding announcements begins Monday. All engagement and wedding notices will appear in the Sunday Journal and Star, and no announcements will be carried in the daily editions of the Lincoln Star.

A new combination "engagement-wedding form packet" with return envelopes has been prepared for the convenience of the couple. These packets, will be mailed out upon telephone request (473-7317) or may be picked up in person at the Lincoln Star, 926 P St.

The packet will also explain the following changes in wedding-engagement announcement policies:

—One picture will be used during the engagement-wedding sequence. The couple may choose to use a picture either at the time of the engagement announcement or the wedding.

—Material should be in the Star office one week prior to the engagement announcement or wedding event.

—No picture will be used if received after the wedding has taken place.

—Wedding news received after the event will be shortened in length and no stories will be run on any weddings received more than one month after the event.

—No pictures will be returned.

Couples whose engagement or wedding picture appeared during the last six months may pick up those pictures before June 26. After that date all pictures in the Star files will be destroyed.

Critics Censure ITT Intervention

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Twenty economic experts condemned subversive activities by multinational corporations Sunday and cited "the actions of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. in Chile" as an example.

"Such actions can only bring discredit to the business community and negatively affect the image of those corporations which do not resort to such unjustifiable methods," they said in a U.N. report on multinational corporations.

They recommended that the U.N. Economic and Social Council set up a 25-member commission on multinational corporations; that the commission and council work out a code of conduct between the corporations and governments, and that the U.N. Secretariat set up an information and research center on multinational corporations.

They said a multinational corporation could help or harm a host country's economic development, and suggested that the two sides agree on rules permitting the country to increase ownership of the corporation but to provide for fair compensation. They urged that the corporation's home and host countries permit union activity and protect consumers.

Chile's late Socialist President Salvador Allende told the U.N. General Assembly on Dec. 4, 1972 that ITT sought in 1970 to prevent his taking office and plotted in 1971 to sow disorder in Chile, hoping to provoke a military coup d'etat. He was overthrown and died in a military coup last Sept. 17.

Two Lincolinites Hurt In Mishap

Two people were injured in a one-car accident on a county road four miles west and three miles north of Crete, the State Patrol reported Sunday afternoon.

The Patrol identified the driver of the car as Mark Swanson, 20, of Lincoln. A passenger was identified as Sandy Salinas, 17, also of Lincoln.

Swanson lost control of his vehicle and hit a light pole, the patrol reported, and both were taken to Crete Hospital for treatment of cuts and bruises.

Crackdown Urged On Hearing Aid Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Charles Percy called Sunday for a government crackdown on the hearing aid industry that would limit sales to prescriptions only and bring an end to "immoral" prices and profits.

Industry spokesmen retorted that the Illinois Republican, who wears a hearing aid himself, was attempting only to further his 1976 presidential hopes with a "biased . . . and inaccurate" appeal to the millions of Americans who suffer from hearing loss.

"It is past time," said Percy, "to move aggressively and with dispatch to right the many wrongs that have been done to the hard-of-hearing, so many of whom are senior citizens with too few resources to protest."

His remarks came in letters to the heads of the Federal Trade Commission and the Food and Drug Administration and in a speech prepared for delivery on the Senate floor Monday.

Percy cited estimates that more than two million Americans now use hearing aids and that up to 20 million suffer some degree of hearing loss.

In his letter to FDA Commissioner Alexander Schmidt, Percy said that too many of the 15,000 hearing aid dealers and salesmen "are not medically qualified nor adequately equipped to diagnose and treat acute ear disorders."

He urged the agency to enact new rules forbidding future sales without a bonafide medical prescription.

He said 600,000 new aids are sold annually by the $150 million industry, with retail prices about 2½ times those of wholesale.

National Ag Teachers To Convene In Lincoln

The National Association of Colleges and Teachers of Agriculture (NACTA) has chosen Lincoln as the site of its 1974 annual convention. The group will convene at the Nebraska Center June 19-21.

Several teaching awards and teacher fellows will be presented at the convention in recognition of outstanding educational service, explained University of Nebraska-Lincoln ag communications assistant professor Virginia Book.

National speakers will address the convention on the overall theme, "Communication Between the Agricultural Classroom and the Consumer." Ives J. Russell, vice president of the American Meat Institute at Washington, D.C., will speak at the third general session June 20.

Thursday evening's banquet speaker Dr. Roger Welsch, NU assistant professor of English, will relate "Tall Tales of the Great Plains."

Discussions June 21, will center on IOTA workshops at colleges of agriculture. IOTA is an experimental program called "Instrument for Observing Teaching Activity." Prof. Book noted that Nebraska was among the first states to implement this experimental program and will offer information on its approach. Others presenting reports on their experience with IOTA will be representatives of the University of Vermont and Washington State University.

Professor Book explained that the goals of NACTA are to improve higher education in agriculture, to raise the quality of instruction to even higher levels, and to provide a forum for examining strengths and weaknesses and for sharing ideas.

Wind Blamed For Blackout

Lexington (UPI)—Utilities Manager Jack Heaton said high winds were apparently responsible for a 40-minute power outage here early Sunday afternoon.

Heaton said officials believe the wind whipped power lines together six miles east of here at a Nebraska Public Power District substation, throwing a breaker switch.

The circuit was the main line into the city, and cut off power to virtually all of Lexington from 12:02-12:40 p.m.

Seven Of Ten UNL Teachers Found To Be Tenured

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Seven out of 10 University of Nebraska-Lincoln faculty members hold tenure, according to a survey compiled by Ned S. Hedges, assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs.

The NU Board of Regents requested the information, after criticism in March by Regent Robert Prokop of Wilber that too many NU faculty hold tenure. He said that would result in an aging tenured staff, a purported detriment to younger scholars.

New regents-approved tenure guidelines at the University of Nebraska-Omaha reward excellence in performance with promotion, rather than permanent appointment guaranteed by tenure, sometimes construed as a right protecting academic freedom.

Acceptable Conduct
Tenure at UNO is granted now only after a faculty member has demonstrated satisfactory research or teaching and acceptable conduct; and then, only if UNO can afford it.

Slightly more than half of UNO faculty members are tenured.
Some colleges and universities in the country and Nebraska have dropped tenure.

72% Tenured
At UNL 72% or 804 faculty hold tenure while 312 do not. Those totals break down this way:

- Full professors: 423 tenured, 10 non-tenured — 98%.
- Associate professors: 325 tenured, 52 non-tenured — 86%.
- Assistant professors: 56 tenured, 206 non-tenured — 21%.

No faculty member with the rank of instructor may hold tenure. Of 135 UNL instructors, however, 44 are currently on tenure-leading lines. All these statistics on faculty status are valid through March 1974.

Non-tenurable positions also include temporary appointees, courtesy appointments, instructors who are candidates for advanced degrees, persons on grant funds and part-time faculty.

10% Increase
The 804 professors with tenure represent about a 10% increase in the tenurable staff this year.

Tenure is not automatically awarded after completion of a certain number of years on the faculty; rather, it is recommended based on academic and personal qualifications that a department desires in its staff.

Past studies at UNL indicate that only about one in four faculty members hired eventually receive tenure, recommended in various ways. Most common is sanction by a department chairman after formal or informal discussion with tenured faculty in his or her department.

Chairmen Suggest
Sometimes the chairman alone, or after consultation with a committee or academic dean, will recommend tenure.

Although most department chairmen have contended that tenure recommendations are considered carefully, they have acknowledged tenure awards were subject to error because of judgment required, according to past studies.

For example, department chairmen polled said they believed tenure was awarded half the time when it should've been denied. And it was denied one in five times when it should have been granted.

Some Not Teachers
Some university staff members have faculty status and attain tenure but do not teach (librarians, for example, or Ag College experiment station and extension staff). Some administrators hold tenure as faculty members but are not included in tenure totals, because the status doesn't extend to their administrative positions.

Resignations are sometimes attributed to failure to attain tenure and even the fear of possibly being denied it. But past studies how tenure alone hasn't prevented UNL faculty from resigning.

Fewer complaints — mostly from students and other faculty members — historically have been lodged against tenured staff, as opposed to those who were non-tenured.

The will stipulates the foundation's board of directors determine the use of the funds. It has been proposed that the income from the bequest be awarded annually as a scholarship to an actuarial science or insurance student at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Mr. Rathburn, a retired vice president of the First Trust Co., died in April. His wife died in 1966. He was a member of the class of 1907 and Mrs. Rathburn was graduated in 1908.

Omaha Lawyer Slated To Talk On Health Act

The Lincoln Personnel Management Association is a group of 115 personnel and labor relations executives in the Lincoln area.

Omaha's John Voss, two time singles champion, and wife, Doris, 1974 women's champ, talk with fellow Omaha shooter while waiting to shoot at the Nebraska State Trapshoot in Doniphan. John lost out in his bid for three singles titles in a row, losing to Big Springs' Bueford Bailey Saturday.

Grim Rapidly Rises To Trapshooting Fame

By TOM VINT

Doniphan — In 1965 Del Grim, then of Lincoln, entered his first Nebraska State Trapshoot. In 1966, Del Grim became the second member of the Central Nebraska Gun Club to win the Grand American handicap title.

Del was still a Lincolnite when he won the Grand, trapshootings answer to the World Series or the Masters Golf Classic. He moved to Grand Island with the Pacific Tool when it was purchased and transported by Grand Island's Hornady people.

"This is the only gun club in the world, most likely, to have two past Grand winners," Grim said. Orville Boorhees, also from Grand Island, won the Grand in 1950.

His job with Pacific and his boyhood hunting days drew Del into trapshooting.

"I wouldn't be a trapshooter if it wasn't for my job, the Pacific assistant manager pointed out.

Rains Halt CWS

Omaha — Steady rains forced postponement Sunday of the scheduled first-round game between Seton Hall and Southern Illinois in the College World Series.

Officials twice removed the tarpaulin from the Rosenblatt Stadium field. But after a 40-minute delay, the game was postponed until Monday morning at 10 a.m.

That will necessitate the loser to play two games back-to-back and the winner must also play two games on Monday.

If all four games are played as scheduled on Monday, the tournament will be back on schedule.

Monday's games:

10 a.m. — Southern Illinois (47-10) vs. Seton Hall (33-8).
1 p.m. — Texas (52-7) vs. loser of 10 a.m. game.
5 p.m. — Oklahoma (42-6) vs. Miami (49-9).
8 p.m. — Southern California (46-19) vs. winner of 10 a.m. game.

"Aw, dad, let's just forget it. We'll never find a place to fish anyway."

He was close to being correct as nearly 3,000 youngsters, ages one to 16, took part in the annual Lincoln Kids Fishing Derby at Holmes Lake Sunday afternoon.

The winds created two problems for the day's fishing. The first being the drifting fish lines which found ingenious methods of entangling themselves with everyone else's line along the bank.

Irwin Captures Second

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hubie Green had the rest of the field playing for second place.

He had a two-shot lead when the day's play started in the final round of the Philadelphia Golf Classic, increased it to three after three holes, led by six after seven and breezed home to his third title of the year by a comfortable four strokes Sunday.

And that despite a double bogey six on the eighth hole.

"A few years ago it might have bothered me a lot," he said. "It might have cost me the tournament. This time it didn't bother me too much. I knew I still had the lead, three or four strokes, and it didn't bother me at all."

Green, now winner of three tournaments this year was the front-runner all the way.

He nailed it down with a final-round, four-under-par 68 that included birdies in all four of the par-five holes on the 6,708 yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course.

Green took the lead in the tournament's second round and led by an increasing margin the rest of the way, finishing with a 271 total.

The 27-year-old Green, as usual dressed in his trademark green ensemble, collected $30,000 from the total purse of $150,000 and pushed his season's earnings to $156,165 for the year, second only to Johnny Miller. His victory total also is second only to Miller's five titles for the season.

Irwin, however, acknowledged he never really was in contention.

"I was really just trying to catch second," he said. "If first

Surprised Wade Midwest Winner

By BOB MOYER

No one was more surprised than Joe Wade when he emerged the victor in a hotly contested super stock main event at Midwest Speedway Sunday night.

"I was lucky," said Wade. "If it hadn't been for that yellow flag I would never have won."

That yellow flag came with two laps to go when a car driven by Steve Bosselman got out of shape, forcing a restart. At the time Jack Golder of Hooper was leading and Wade was second.

But while moving up from the pack, Wade had been "going to school" on Golder. The lesson was well learned for Wade passed Golder coming out of the second turn after the restart.

"I was watching him (Golder) drive around the hole on the first turn. He was going down low so I went up high and crossed the path he had been going to get around him," said Wade.

Golder, who battled with Jay Sterns of Lincoln for the lead the rest of the race, offered no excuses. "I just didn't drive fast enough," said Golder.

But it was Sterns who looked like he was going to win for most of the race.

After moving up from the pack, Sterns passed Golder, the early leader on the seventh lap. "He was just hooking up better than me," noted Golder.

Sterns led until the tenth lap when he ran into a lapped car driven by Lowell Krueger. "He (Krueger) should have been running down low on the track," said Sterns. "He wasn't, so I had to go up high to miss him and when I did Golder passed me."

Golder held on until the 16th lap when Sterns passed him again to regain the lead for the second time. After that Sterns seemed to be running away with the race, taking a good lead over Golder and Wade, who by now had moved up to third.

But adversity struck the hard-luck Sterns again when Rex Jordan lost his tire and slid his car into the wall coming out of turn four.

That necessitated a restart. Sterns got a good jump on Golder but going into the first turn he hit a hole, causing a flat tire and forcing him out of the race.

"When I hit the hole it rolled the tire," said Sterns. "I thought I was going to win because we were really hooking up good. It's pretty discouraging."

With Sterns out of the race, Golder regained the lead for the third time, only to lose it to Wade on the last restart with two laps to go.

Dean Burling ended up third in the race, while David City's Terry Richards, starting in the last row, battled up to fourth place. Richards, the super stock point leader going into Sunday night's races, won the first three main events this season at Midwest.

In the hobby main, Hank Bulin battled up from the back of the pack but ran out of laps and settled for second place as Stan Truksa emerged the victor.

The next racing in Lincoln will be Wednesday at Midwest Speedway when the sprint cars resume action at 8 p.m. An added bonus for the fans will be the addition of hobby stock car racing on the program.

Midwest track owner Pete Leikam said the hobby stockers will run a program similar to the one they have on Sunday nights, with several heat races, a trophy dash and a main event.

is out of reach, you play for second. And the way Hubie was playing, I had no chance of catching first."

Miller, who started the day's play in second place just two shots back, knocked himself out of it with a double-bogey five on the fourth hole, a par three. He flew his tee shot over the green and out of bounds.

He wasn't in contention again and had to make eagle three on the 17th hole to salvage par 72 and a share of third at 277. He was tied at the figure with four sophomore Tom Jenkins—Green's biggest challenger. Jenkins had a 71.

"He's the guy I was worried about," Green said. "For a guy who hadn't played too well before, for a guy who'd never had a chance to win, he hung in there like a rusty nail—and he hung in too long to suit me. He really played well."

Tom Weiskopf, a two-time Philadelphia champion and the defending titleholder, closed with a 69 and was fifth, alone at 279—eight shots back.

Green, who once spent a year as an assistant pro at nearby Merion Golf Club, birdied all four of the par fives and said the double bogey didn't really bother him. "I still had a pretty good lead—three or four strokes—and the holes that I figured to do bad on were behind me," he said. "I'd started the day with a two-shot lead and I'd played eight holes and I was still leading so I figured it wasn't too bad."

He really wasn't threatened seriously, led all through the final round and won easily.

Green took a three-shot lead with a wedge to two feet for a birdie on the third hole, was five in front when Miller made the double bogey on the fourth and pushed his advantage to six shots with a five-foot birdie putt on the fifth hole and a 18-footer on the seventh.

The double bogey cut his lead to four, and when Jenkins birdied the ninth and 10th it was trimmed to two.

Desert Classic To Carner

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Joanne Carner came from three strokes behind in the final round Sunday to overtake Sandra Palmer and win her third tournament in four weeks by capturing the $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Desert Golf Classic.

A final-round three-under-par 70 earned her a one-stroke victory over Carole Jo Skala. The winner was eight under for the four days with a total of 284.

The victory was worth $20,000 plus a new car.

Mrs. Skala was five shots off the pace at the start of the day, but recorded a 69 to pass Ms. Palmer, who ran into trouble with a 76 for the day and finished at 287.

Shelley Hamlin, who was tied for third at the start of the final round, was seven under par and tied for the lead after eight holes. She finished with a 73, however, in a four way tie for fourth at 288 with Jane Blalock, Carol Mann and Gail Denenberg.

Tied for eighth were Laura Baugh and Sally Little at 289 and at 290 were Mary Lou Crocker and Judy Rankin.

Mrs. Carner just didn't let up and finally got the lead for good at the 13th when she made an 11-foot putt for a birdie.

Green Wins Golf Meet

Irwin Captures Second

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hubie Green had the rest of the field playing for second place.

He had a two-shot lead when the day's play started in the final round of the Philadelphia Golf Classic, increased it to three after three holes, led by six after seven and breezed home to his third title of the year by a comfortable four strokes Sunday.

And that despite a double bogey six on the eighth hole.

"A few years ago it might have bothered me a lot," he said. "It might have cost me the tournament. This time it didn't bother me too much. I knew I still had the lead, three or four strokes, and it didn't bother me at all."

"I'd started the day with a two-shot lead and I'd played eight holes and I was still leading so I figured it wasn't too bad."

He really wasn't threatened seriously, led all through the final round and won easily.

Green took a three-shot lead with a wedge to two feet for a birdie on the third hole, was five in front when Miller made the double bogey on the fourth and pushed his advantage to six shots with a five-foot birdie putt on the fifth hole and a 13-footer on the seventh.

The double bogey cut his lead to four, and when Jenkins birdied the ninth and 10th it was trimmed to two.

Desert Classic To Carner

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Joanne Carner came from three strokes behind in the final round Sunday to overtake Sandra Palmer and win her third tournament in four weeks by capturing the $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Desert Golf Classic.

A final-round three-under-par 70 earned her a one-stroke victory over Carole Jo Skala. The winner was eight under for the four days with a total of 284.

The victory was worth $20,000 plus a new car.

Mrs. Skala was five shots off the pace at the start of the day, but recorded a 69 to pass Ms. Palmer, who ran into trouble with a 76 for the day and finished at 287.

Shelley Hamlin, who was tied for third at the start of the final round, was seven under par and tied for the lead after eight holes. She finished with a 73, however, in a four way tie for fourth at 288 with Jane Blalock, Carol Mann and Gail Denenberg.

Tied for eighth were Laura Baugh and Sally Little at 289 and at 290 were Mary Lou Crocker and Judy Rankin.

Mrs. Carner just didn't let up and finally got the lead for good at the 13th when she made an 11-foot putt for a birdie.

Omaha's John Voss, two time singles champion, and wife, Doris, 1974 women's champ, talk with fellow Omaha shooter while waiting to shoot at the Nebraska State Trapshoot in Doniphan. John lost out in his bid for three singles titles in a row, losing to Big Springs' Buford Bailey Saturday.

Grim Rapidly Rises To Trapshooting Fame

By TOM VINT

Doniphan — In 1965 Del Grim, then of Lincoln, entered his first Nebraska State Trapshoot. In 1966, Del Grim became the second member of the Central Nebraska Gun Club to win the Grand American handicap title.

Del was still a Lincolnite when he won the Grand, trapshootings answer to the World Series or the Masters Golf Classic. He moved to Grand Island with the Pacific Tool when it was purchased and transported by Grand Island's Hornady people.

"This is the only gun club in the world, most likely, to have two past Grand winners," Grim said. Orville Boorhees, also from Grand Island, won the Grand in 1950.

Grim was taking part in his ninth straight Nebraska State Trapshoot after a start in the Lincoln Industrial League. In fact, he was one of the original 47 shooters to have helped start the league.

His job with Pacific and his boyhood hunting days drew Del into trapshooting.

"I wouldn't be a trapshooter if it wasn't for my job, the Pacific assistant manager pointed out.

Rains Halt CWS

Omaha — Steady rains forced postponement Sunday of the scheduled first-round game between Seton Hall and Southern Illinois in the College World Series.

Officials twice removed the tarpaulin from the Rosenblatt Stadium field. But after a 40-minute delay, the game was postponed until Monday morning at 10 a.m.

That will necessitate the loser to play two games back-to-back and the winner must also play two games on Monday.

If all four games are played as scheduled on Monday, the tournament will be back on schedule.

Monday's games:
10 a.m. — Southern Illinois (47-10) vs. Seton Hall (33-8)
1 p.m. — Texas (52-7) vs. loser of 10 a.m. game.
5 p.m. — Oklahoma (42-6) vs. Miami (49-9)
8 p.m. — Southern California (46-19) vs. winner of 10 a.m. game.

Rutherford Captures Mays Race

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Texan Johnny Rutherford survived early troubles and charged back to victory in the 25th Rex Mays 150-mile race for U.S. auto club cars Sunday.

The smiling Texan made it two straight after his Indianapolis 500 victory May 26, outdueling second place finisher Gary Bettenhausen and a race-ending surge of rain drops.

Rutherford and Bettenhausen, both driving Offenhauser-powered McLarens, came back from spins in the race to finish at least one lap ahead of the rest of the 24-car field.

Bettenhausen contended he had actually won the race, but it was not immediately known if his crew would file an official protest.

Bettenhausen, whose father Tony won earlier races at the Wisconsin State Fair Park one-mile oval, actually benefited from his spin late in the race.

He made a pit stop after the incident and his crew gave him a full load of fuel for additional power to make him the most competitive car running at the finish.

Bobby Unser, who had finished no worse than second in his five races this year, finished 20th after a piston broke in his car early in the race. He was shooting for an unprecedented third consecutive victory in this race.

Kids Derby Draws 3,000 Hopeful Anglers

By TOM VINT
Outdoor Writer

A five-year-old tugged at his father's pant leg.

"Aw, dad, let's just forget it. We'll never find a place to fish anyway."

He was close to being correct as nearly 3,000 youngsters, ages one to 16, took part in the annual Lincoln Kids Fishing Derby at Holmes Lake Sunday afternoon.

The massive turnout easily topped last year's record of nearly 1,000, despite threatening weather which whipped up high winds. The winds created two problems for the day's fishing. The first being the drifting fish lines which found ingenious methods of entangling themselves with everyone else's line along the bank.

The second problem was the overturning sailboats which often drifted into shore and into the young fishermen.

The winds and sprinkling rain didn't bother the kids too much as hundreds of bullheads, bluegill, catfish and carp succumbed to bait offerings. Fish ranged in size from a few inches to over 20. One largemouth bass in the 1½-pound range was also caught.

"I think we have a problem here," one mother chuckled. The problem was three boys' fishing lines were hopelessly caught on each other. Only a handy pocketknife saved the day and permitted the anglers to continue the contest.

Winds and weather kept the derby to 1½ hours instead of the two hours as planned. All but a handful of the successful fishermen were still awarded one of the hundreds of prizes from Johnson Reels, Zebco, Berkley, Dura-Pak, Surplus Center and the Lincoln Firefighters Association.

Thanks to a communications network set up by the Lincoln Amateur Radio Club and the measurements and logs of the Lincoln

Bass Club, the top fish were honored within minutes of the closure of the contest.

"The weather wasn't the most ideal but the turnout was great," derby organizer Jan Perrin of Surplus Center said. "This is great for the kids."

"If nothing else, we proved to the kids and parents we do have fish which can be caught right here in the city lake. The prizes for those who got them were nice but the ideal of families fishing together is what we are aiming at."

For those kids able to keep untangled and catch fish, night-crawlers proved most popular and most successful. And, there was more than one tottler who found out how tasty the worms were, also. As one parent put it, "Yegh, we found the secret. It is night-crawlers and keeping your line in the water. Mostly keeping the line in the water."

It must have worked. The youngster had four fish on the stringer.

THE PADDOCK

'Courageous Person'

Omaha — Frank Basil was here last week for a ceremony honoring one of his best friends. Sadly, though, it was the induction of the late Tom Brock into the Nebraska Racing Hall of Fame at Ak-Sar-Ben.

"Tom and I were very good friends," said Basil, the man who succeeded Brock as president of the national Thoroughbred Racing Association. "We were friends as directors of the TRA and then he nominated me to succeed him as TRA president. He was a very dedicated and loyal president."

Frank Basil

"I first knew him in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., when I was an auditor for a public utility holding company and he was a football coach," said Basil, a former president of the New York Racing Association, the managers of racing at Aqueduct, Belmont and Saratoga in New York state.

"He was a very courageous person," Basil continued. "I was privileged to present Tom with a special award at the 1973 TRA convention as my first official act as the new TRA president. It was a very emotional time since I knew Tom was seriously ill and it was just a question of time."

"But he had courage and he still had his sense of humor," he said. "I was a better person for having met him."

Brock, who as general manager of Ak-Sar-Ben brought the Omaha track into national prominence, died last May. He had served with Basil on the TRA's executive staff since 1969.

Off-Track Betting

While Basil was more than anxious to discuss Tom Brock, he was hesitant to discuss the off-track betting aspect that has been with New York racing since 1970.

"The reason is obvious. Basil, who is now the executive director of the finance committee of the NYRA, has constantly lashed out at the OTB sector which has made it easier and more convenient to go to the cornershop than to attend the races in person."

"I've said so much against it that I really don't want to talk about it any more," he said. "My only advice is that it's not the panacea that it's made out to be. Just take a look at the results of the New York racing."

"I'd rather not talk about it, but I was pretty heavy against it in a speech I made in Canada," he added. "I've been against it ever since it was mentioned. We have it and there's nothing we can do except improve it."

Is off-track betting destined to cover the rest of the country, including Nebraska?

"I can see the clouds, but like the weatherman there are clouds but no rain," he replied. "I'll repeat, it's not the panacea that they make it appear. With racing today, it's getting to be a question of survival. The proliferation of racing, competition from other entertainment and sports..."

While Basil was cautious in discussing off-track betting, he knows it is an aspect of racing, especially in New York, that can't be ignored.

That's one area where Basil is most concerned since his finance committee must keep reviewing any financial problems of the NYRA. He also must report to the board any changes in legislation which may affect the tracks.

Frank Basil and Spencer Drayton, founder and president of the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau, were two guests at the Racing Hall of Fame ceremonies which indicated the strides Nebraska racing and Ak-Sar-Ben have taken during the past few years.

Evert Advancing In French Open

PARIS (AP) — Cool little Chris Evert dropped the first two games Sunday in her match against Virginia Ruzici of Romania but then came back strongly to win 6-2, 6-3, to join the last 16 in the French Open Tennis Tournament.

In the men's singles, Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., Erik van Dillen of Aptos, Calif., and Eddie Dibbs of Miami also got to the last 16.

Riessen beat Jose Higueras of Spain 6-1, 6-4, 7-5, after coming from behind 3-5 in the last set. Van Dillen defeated Barry Phillips-Moore of Australia 3-6, 6-2, 6-0, 6-4, when the Australian served a double fault at match point.

A crowd of about 12,000 at Roland Garros Stadium was peeled by rain and burned by the sun during the day. After a half dozen morning matches were completed, heavy rain stopped play for about two hours. Later the sun came out to dry the red clay courts.

Rain caused an incident near the end of the day. Raul Ramirez of Mexico was serving at match point against Patrick Proisy of France when a shower broke. Ramirez wanted to play on, Proisy wanted to quit. Ramirez served and Proisy stood with his hands on his hips. While the argument went on, the rain subsided.

Finally, the last point was replayed and Ramirez won 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Nettles' Propels Yankees

United Press International

Graig Nettles, who slammed his 12th homer earlier in the game, singled home Lou Piniella with two out in the ninth to climax a three-run rally and give the New York Yankees a 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins Sunday, before a "Bat Day" crowd of 50,093 at Shea Stadium, the largest attendance for an American League game this season.

The Yanks entered the ninth trailing 3-1 when Jim Mason singled, moved to second on a walk to El Maddox and scored on Piniella's single. Pinch-hitter Rick Dempsey then singled home Maddox with the tying run and Nettles followed with his single to rightfield.

Nettles' homer in the sixth inning was his first since April 28.

In other games, Detroit downed California, 5-3, Texas nicked Baltimore, 3-2, Boston downed Chicago, 10-6, Cleveland beat Kansas City, 8-6 and Oakland nipped Milwaukee, 5-4.

Willie Horton boomed a two-run double over the centerfielder's head, capping a three-run rally in the fourth inning that brought the Tigers their win and a sweep of the three game series with the Angels.

Jim Fregosi drove in two runs with his fourth homer and a single when the Rangers edged the Orioles. Jim Bibby, 8-8, gained the victory although Steve Foucault preserved the win with his fifth save as the two combined on a four-hitter.

Bob Montgomery drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Carl Yastrzemski hit three singles to lead the Red Sox over the White Sox. Dick Allen's 300th career homer in the first inning and a pair of home runs by Ron Santo couldn't offset the 11-hit Red Sox attack.

Oscar Gamble lashed a tie-breaking homer and Leron Lee drilled a pair of run-scoring singles, sparking the Indians over the Royals. Gamble stroked a one-out homer, his seventh of the season, in the fifth, breaking a 4-4 tie. Lee, who drove in the Indians' first run in the second, added another run-scoring single in the sixth.

Sal Bando and Deron Johnson blasted home runs to lead the A's to their victory over the Brewers. A jacket-day crowd of 46,812 set a Brewers record for their five years in Milwaukee.

NFL Players Give Ultimatum To Club Owners

CHICAGO (UPI) — The National Football League Players Association said Sunday it will go on strike if a new agreement is not reached with club owners by July 1.

Edward R. Garvey, the association's executive director, said the walkout would include newly-signed rookies slated to play against the Miami Dolphins in a charity All-Star game in Chicago on July 28.

"We have 12 days of negotiations with the owners between now and July 1," Garvey told a news conference. "If nothing is settled by that time, we will declare a strike."

He said union representatives would be talking to the 1974 rookie crop, including those on the All-Star roster, in the intervening days, "so that everything will be all set by the July 1 deadline."

The players association and the owners are scheduled to resume talks Tuesday for the first time since the union's long list of demands were presented to the bosses.

The owners responded with a quick no to the 63 demands when handed the list April 4.

Little Current Not Secretariat

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretariat would have beaten Little Current by 26 lengths if they had met in Saturday's Belmont Stakes...based on comparative times.

Secretariat, now retired, swept the Triple Crown for 3-year-olds last year by winning the Belmont by a fantastic 31 lengths in the record time of 2:24 for the 1 1/4-mile classic. Little Current took the 1974 Belmont by seven lengths in 2:29 1-5.

This difference of 5 1-5 seconds is the equivalent of 26 lengths based on the theory in horse racing that one-fifth second equals one length.

Hayes Termed Satisfactory

Hayes' physicians said the Buckeye coach of 24 years, who earned a total of 192 college victories, suffered a mild heart attack Thursday morning.

Davis' Hitting Sparks Expos

United Press International
Willie Davis paced a 12-hit Montreal attack with a double and two singles to lead the Expos to a 7-3 victory in the second game of a Sunday doubleheader after the Atlanta Braves won the opener, 3-2, despite getting only four hits.

Davis' double came in the first inning when he and Ken Singleton, who had walked, both scored on Bob Bailey's single. His first single drove in Barry Foote in the second inning and he singled and scored in the sixth inning when Singleton's sacrifice fly accounted for one run and Davis romped home on a passed ball.

The Braves made the most of their hits in the first game with Ralph Garr getting three of the four with a triple and two singles.

Garr singled home winning pitcher Phil Niekro, 7-4, with the first run of the game and the Braves' other two runs came in the fifth inning when Dave Johnson and Mike Lum led off with walks and were driven in by a fielder's choice by Craig Robinson and a single by Niekro.

In other games, Houston trounced New York, 11-1, Los Angeles shaded Chicago, 4-3, San Diego edged St. Louis, 6-5, Pittsburgh routed San Francisco, 14-1 and Cincinnati defeated Philadelphia, 14-7.

Tommy Helms' two-run single in the second inning staked the Houston Astros to an early lead and a barrage of 13 hits allowed Astros' righthander Tom Griffin to coast to an easy win over the Mets. Griffin struck out eight enroute to his seventh win of the season and his fourth complete game.

Pinch-hitter Von Joshua singled in Willie Crawford from second base with one out in the ninth to give the Dodgers their victory over the Cubs.

Bobby Tolan slammed a three-run homer with two out in the bottom of the eighth inning to give the Padres a triumph over the Cardinals and a sweep of their three-game series.

Willie Stargell drove in six runs with his ninth career grand slam and a two-run blast and Richie Zisk hit for the cycle and drove in five runs in powering the Pirates over the Giants.

Terry Crowley and Johnny Bench hit two-run homers and Cincinnati used a seven-run seventh inning to defeat the Phillies.

In the seventh, Pete Rose walked and scored on Bench's home run. After a walk to Perez, Dan Driessen doubled to drive in a run. Eddie Watt walked pinch-hitter George Foster and then served up an RBI single to Cesar Geronimo. Pinch-hitter Hal King singled in two more runs and after Rose singled, Joe Morgan beat out an infield hit and pinch-runner Darrell Chaney scored on Dave Cash's throwing error. Morgan also homered in the ninth.

'Courageous Person'

Omaha — Frank Basil was here last week for a ceremony honoring one of his best friends. Sadly, though, it was the induction of the late Tom Brock into the Nebraska Racing Hall of Fame at Ak-Sar-Ben.

"Tom and I were very good friends," said Basil, the man who succeeded Brock as president of the national Thoroughbred Racing Association. "We were friends as directors of the TRA and then he nominated me to succeed him as TRA president. He was a very dedicated and loyal president."

Frank Basil

time since I knew Tom was seriously ill and it was just a question of time.

"But he had courage and he still had his sense of humor," he said. "I was a better person for having met him."

Brock, who as general manager of Ak-Sar-Ben brought the Omaha track into national prominence, died last May. He had served with Basil on the TRA's executive staff since 1969.

Off-Track Betting

While Basil was more than anxious to discuss Tom Brock, he was hesitant to discuss the off-track betting aspect that has been with New York racing since 1970.

"The reason is obvious. Basil, who is now the executive director of the finance committee of the NYRA, has constantly lashed out at the OTB sector which has made it easier and more convenient to go to the cornershop than to attend the races in person."

"I've said so much against it that I really don't want to talk about it any more," he said. "My only advice is that it's not the panacea that it's made out to be. Just take a look at the results of the New York racing."

"I'd rather not talk about it, but I was pretty heavy against it in a speech I made in Canada," he added. "I've been against it ever since it was mentioned. We have it and there's nothing we can do except improve it."

Is off-track betting destined to cover the rest of the country, including Nebraska?

"I can see the clouds, but like the weatherman there are clouds but no rain," he replied. "I'll repeat, it's not the panacea that they make it appear. With racing today, it's getting to be a question of survival. The proliferation of racing, competition from other entertainment and sports."

While Basil was cautious in discussing off-track betting, he knows it is an aspect of racing, especially in New York, that can't be ignored.

That's one area where Basil is most concerned since his finance committee must keep reviewing any financial problems of the NYRA. He also must report to the board any changes in legislation which may affect the tracks.

Frank Basil and Spencer Drayton, founder and president of the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau, were two guests at the Racing Hall of Fame ceremonies which indicated the strides Nebraska racing and Ak-Sar-Ben have taken during the past few years.

Evert Advancing In French Open

PARIS (AP) — Cool little Chris Evert dropped the first two games Sunday in her match against Virginia Ruzici of Romania but then came back strongly to win 6-2, 6-3, to join the last 16 in the French Open Tennis Tournament.

In the men's singles, Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., Erik van Dillen of Aptos, Calif., and Eddie Dibbs of Miami also got to the last 16.

Riessen beat Jose Higueros of Spain 6-1, 6-4, 7-5, after coming from behind 3-5 in the last set. Van Dillen defeated Barry Phillips-Moore of Australia 3-6, 6-2, 6-0, 6-4, when the Australian served a double fault at match point.

Dibbs finished off a match interrupted by rain Saturday with a 6-0, 6-1, 7-6 victory over Corrado Barazzutti of Italy.

A crowd of about 12,000 at Roland Garros Stadium was pelted by rain and burned by the sun during the day. After a half dozen morning matches were completed, heavy rain stopped play for about two hours. Later the sun came out to dry the red clay courts.

Rain caused an incident near the end of the day. Raul Ramirez of Mexico was serving at match point against Patrick Proisy of France when a shower broke. Ramirez wanted to play on, Proisy wanted to quit. Ramirez served and Proisy stood with his hands on his hips. While the argument went on, the rain subsided.

Finally, the last point was replayed and Ramirez won 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Nettles' Propels Yankees

United Press International

Graig Nettles, who slammed his 12th homer earlier in the game, singled home Lou Piniella with two out in the ninth to climax a three-run rally and give the New York Yankees a 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins Sunday, before a "Bat Day" crowd of 50,093 at Shea Stadium, the largest attendance for an American League game this season.

The Yanks entered the ninth trailing 3-1 when Jim Mason singled, moved to second on a walk to El Maddox and scored on Piniella's single. Pinch-hitter Rick Dempsey then singled home Maddox with the tying run and Nettles followed with his single to rightfield.

Nettles' homer in the sixth inning was his first since April 28.

In other games, Detroit downed California, 5-3, Texas downed Baltimore, 3-2, Boston downed Chicago, 10-6, Cleveland beat Kansas City, 8-6 and Oakland nipped Milwaukee, 5-4.

Willie Horton boomed a two-run double over the centerfielder's head, capping a three-run rally in the fourth inning that brought the Tigers their win and a sweep of the three game series with the Angels.

Jim Fregosi drove in two runs with his fourth homer and a single when the Rangers edged the Orioles. Jim Bibby, 8-8, gained the victory although Steve Foucault preserved the win with his fifth save as the two combined on a four-hitter.

Bob Montgomery drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Carl Yastrzemski hit three singles to lead the Red Sox over the White Sox. Dick Allen's 300th career homer in the first inning and a pair of home runs by Ron Santo could not offset the 11-hit Red Sox attack.

Oscar Gamble lashed a tie-breaking homer and Leron Lee drilled a pair of run-scoring singles, sparking the Indians over the Royals. Gamble stroked a one-out homer, his seventh of the season, in the fifth, breaking a 4-4 tie. Lee, who drove in the Indians' first run in the second, added another run-scoring single in the sixth.

Sal Bando and Deron Johnson blasted home runs to lead the A's to their victory over the Brewers. A jacket-day crowd of 46,812 set a Brewers record for their five years in Milwaukee.

Little Current Not Secretariat

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretariat would have beaten Little Current by 26 lengths if they had met in Saturday's Belmont Stakes... based on comparative times.

Secretariat, now retired, swept the Triple Crown for 3-year-olds last year by winning the Belmont by a fantastic 31 lengths in the record time of 2:24 for the 1 1/4-mile classic. Little Current took the 1974 Belmont by seven lengths in 2:29 1-5.

This difference of 5 1-5 seconds is the equivalent of 26 lengths based on the theory in horse racing that one-fifth second equals one length.

Hayes Termed Satisfactory

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Woody Hayes, Ohio State's 61-year-old football coach, remained in satisfactory condition Sunday at University Hospital, a spokesman said.

Hayes' physicians said the Buckeye coach of 24 years, who earned a total of 192 college victories, suffered a mild heart attack Thursday morning.

NFL Players Give Ultimatum To Club Owners

CHICAGO (UPI) — The National Football League Players Association said Sunday it will go on strike if a new agreement is not reached with club owners by July 1.

Edward R. Garvey, the association's executive director, said the walkout would include newly-signed rookies slated to play against the Miami Dolphins in a charity All-Star game in Chicago on July 26.

"We have 12 days of negotiations with the owners between now and July 1," Garvey told a news conference. "If nothing is settled by that time, we will declare a strike."

He said union representatives would be talking to the 1974 rookie crop, including those on the All-Star roster, in the intervening days, "so that everything will be all set by the July 1 deadline."

The players association and the owners are scheduled to resume talks Tuesday for the first time since the union's long list of demands were presented to the bosses.

The owners responded with a quick no to the 63 demands when handed the list April 4. A federal mediator persuaded both sides to renew their talks starting Tuesday in New York.

Yarborough, who started the day trailing Richard Petty by a slim 34 points in the NASCAR point standings, took the lead on the 131st lap of the 138-lap race after Allison pitted for gas on the 130th lap.

Davis' Hitting Sparks Expos

United Press International

Willie Davis paced a 12-hit Montreal attack with a double and two singles to lead the Expos to a 7-3 victory in the second game of a Sunday doubleheader after the Atlanta Braves won the opener, 3-2, despite getting only four hits.

Davis' double came in the first inning when he and Ken Singleton, who had walked, both scored on Bob Bailey's single. His first single drove in Barry Foote in the second inning and he singled and scored in the sixth inning when Singleton's sacrifice fly accounted for one run and Davis romped home on a passed ball.

The Braves made the most of their hits in the first game with Ralph Garr getting three of the four with a triple and two singles.

Garr singled home winning pitcher Phil Niekro, 7-4, with the first run of the game and the Braves' other two runs came in the fifth inning when Dave Johnson and Mike Lum led off with walks and were driven in by a fielder's choice by Craig Robinson and a single by Niekro.

In other games, Houston trounced New York, 11-1, Los Angeles shaded Chicago, 4-3, San Diego edged St. Louis, 6-5, Pittsburgh routed San Francisco, 14-1 and Cincinnati defeated Philadelphia, 14-7.

Tommy Helms' two-run single in the second inning started the Houston Astros to an early lead and a barrage of 13 hits allowed Astros' righthander Tom Griffin to coast to an easy win over the Mets. Griffin struck out eight enroute to his seventh win of the season and his fourth complete game.

Pinch-hitter Von Joshua singled in Willie Crawford from second base with one out in the ninth to give the Dodgers their victory over the Cubs.

Bobby Tolan slammed a three-run homer with two out in the bottom of the eighth inning to give the Padres a triumph over the Cardinals and a sweep of their three-game series.

Willie Stargell drove in six runs with his ninth career grand slam and a two-run blast and Richie Zisk hit for the cycle and drove in five runs in powering the Pirates over the Giants.

Terry Crowley and Johnny Bench hit two-run homers and Cincinnati used a seven-run seventh inning to defeat the Phillies.

In the seventh, Pete Rose walked and scored on Bench's home run. After a walk to Perez, Dan Driessen doubled to drive in a run. Eddie Watt walked pinch-hitter George Foster and then served up an RBI single to Cesar Geronimo. Pinch-hitter Hal King singled in two more runs and after Rose' singled, Joe Morgan beat out an infield hit and pinch-runner Darrell Chaney scored on Dave Carrell's throwing error. Morgan also homered in the ninth.

Steeplechase Win

Boosts Tennessee

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Tennessee coach Stan Huntsman got a bath in the steeplechase jumping pool and it was only appropriate because that's where the Volunteers earned their first NCAA Track and Field Championship Saturday night.

The Volunteers of the Southeast Conference picked up 18 vital points in the grueling 3000-meter steeplechase led by a 1-2 finish from Olympian Doug Brown and sophomore sensation Ron Addison, who ran the race of his life.

"I knew I could win it, I only hoped that Ron would stay with me and come in second," said Brown, a senior.

The 60-point landslide was too much for UCLA's defending champion, seeking a fourth consecutive title. The Bruins rallied at the end with a mile relay victory but Clarence Taylor could manage only a fifth in the final event—the triple jump. UCLA finished with 56 points.

"Your kids did a helluva job and you deserved to win," Bush told Huntsman, who was soaked to the skin after being dumped into the pool on the south end of the Memorial Stadium track.

Bush had said before the meet: "If we can't win it, I hope Tennessee does. Their coach is a heckuva guy and they don't depend on a lot of foreign athletes like a lot of teams do."

Tennessee didn't have one foreigner among its point getters while UCLA only had one—a pole vaulter from France.

There was a good deal of mumbling by the coaches at the 53rd annual NCAA meet about the presence of foreign athletes who scored 25.1 per cent of the points in the four days of competition.

"That's one of the reasons I wanted Tennessee to win it if we couldn't," Bush said. "I think we should be developing American athletes in the colleges not foreigners."

At least 65 per cent of the coaches in the meet agreed in a poll that foreigners shouldn't be allowed to compete on a point-producing basis.

Reggie Jones, the Tennessee freshman from Saginaw, Mich., who scored 18 points while winning the 100-yard dash, finishing second in the 220 and running on a third place relay team, was named the meet's outstanding performer.

Other votes went to high hurdler Charles Foster of North Carolina Central, six-mile king John Ngeno of Washington State, 440 titlist Larence Jones of Northeast Missouri State, decathlon winner Ruald Backmun of Brigham Young and 220 champion James Gilkes of Fisk.

Gilkes ran a brilliant wind-aided 19.90 in the 220. It tied the best time ever in the event, but will not go down as a world record because of a 7.4 mile an hour wind.

"I was a bit tight because of a groin injury and I knew I wouldn't be too good around the turn," Gilkes said. "But I felt I could finish strong because I normally come from behind and I was correct."

Canadian Wheat Crop No More Than Average

©The New York Times
Regina, Sask. — At a time when buyers all over the world are looking to Canada's prairies as a source of badly needed wheat, it now appears that — at best — this year's crop will be no better than average.

The reason is the weather. Heavy snowfalls, followed by heavy spring rains, have so delayed seeding that until quite recently the government marketing agency was predicting that this summer would produce a disappointingly small harvest.

The situation has improved during the last week or so, but there is still little optimism in a year that many farm people had hoped would break records.

"If we have another week or 10 days like this, we could get up to around the level of last year's crop," said Otto E. Lang, the federal cabinet minister charged with wheat marketing.

Since wheat needs 100 days to grow here, and since killing frost in mid-September is not uncommon, farmers like to get it into the ground by June 1, and late May is the usual seeding time.

But this May there was more than twice as much rain here as usual — 3.7 inches compared with 1.5 inches — as well as severe flooding from melting snow, and an air traveler in Saskatchewan, which produces two-thirds of Canada's wheat, still sees hundreds of pools of water dotting the farm land.

As farmers waited for their land to get dry enough, only 25% of Manitoba wheatland was seeded by June 1 this year, and in Saskatchewan the percentage was about 50.

Some farmers have decided to plant less lucrative grains that can grow in a shorter season, and others, still waiting to plant wheat, will spend September praying for warm weather.

"It's a crying shame, it is," said one farmer. "We all thought this was going to be a great year."

Reflecting the increase in the international market price, the Canadian Wheat Board is paying projected gain in U.S. output, will ease the situation when 1974 crops are harvested.

But with the food supply and price situation depending heavily on the success of 1974 harvests, experts are paying more than the usual amount of attention to week-to-week and even day-to-day developments in major nations.

Two separate reports from the Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service Sunday summed up the latest reported developments in the Soviet Union and China.

In China, a report said rainfall since last fall has generally been below normal. But rains have been distributed in a pattern which leads experts to believe the moisture shortage has not greatly reduced crop growth over wide areas, experts said.

Washington (UPI) — Government specialists reported Sunday that spring planting progress in Russia is about average, although it lags behind last year's record pace.

In China, experts said, weather was generally favorable for crop production through mid-May despite droughts in a few areas.

World grain reserves this year are at the lowest level in two decades. Administration farm experts have predicted that a worldwide upswing in crop production, including a sharp

farmers $4.79 a bushel for the best quality wheat, more than twice as much as they were getting a year ago.

With that incentive, the farmers had indicated plans to turn about 26 million acres over to wheat this year. That would have been higher than last year, but still well short of the acreages of the middle 1960s, before a market glut in 1970 scared thousands of farmers away from wheat.

Now, a spokesman for the Wheat Board has revised the estimate down to 22.6 million acres. At 26 bushels per acre, that would mean a Canadian crop in 1974 of between 500 million and 600 million bushels, compared with 628 million bushels last year.

Canada produces about one-third as much wheat as the United States does, but with only one-tenth the population, it exports four bushels out of every five. The Soviet Union and China get, between them, half the exported Canadian wheat.

JON KELLER . . . won a hybrid tea rose in the junior division.

'Chicago Peace' Is Winner At Rose Society Exhibition

Chicago Peace, grown by Ed A. Frerichs, won "Queen of the Show" Sunday in the Lincoln Rose Society 1974 annual rose show.

For the best hybrid tea rose, Frerichs won the Gold Certificate of the American Rose Society (ARS) and a traveling trophy presented by First Federal Savings and Loan Association.

First Federal sponsored the exhibition, held in the 135 N. Cotner branch.

Seward Man Wins

Rose Society members as well as other rose growers exhibited flowers ranging from tiny, delicate Asteroids to "Perfume Delight," the 1974 all-America award winner.

Non-member individual entries included arrangements such as Neptunes in simulated underwater growth amid sea shells, nets, wood, starfish and plants from the deep.

Roses And Onion

Another arrangement displayed Redgold and Mojave incongruously among a curling long-stemmed onion coming out of a piece of gnarled wood.

In another unusual display, Mrs. S. S. Salac devised an inverted fruit tray as the base for a broken glass ladle extending up and out to hold a glass pie plate, from which the flowers rose.

The roses on display were a myriad of colors, some freshly picked Sunday morning from the Woods Park rose garden, 33rd and O.

Children Winners

Even the kids got into the act. Peggy Smith of 6740 S. Bermuda Dr. won the Mini-Royalty Award for best arrangement by a junior. Miss Smith's "Man on the Moon" had Snowfire, Crimson Glory, White Masterpiece and Pascali extending from two half-moons and a "Man" made of rocks standing below holding an American flag.

First Federal's basement was a sea of single long-stemmed roses, waving chest-high in the challenge trophy classes, open only to Rose Society members.

Special Award winners are:

Rock Island Line Holds Two Unenviable Records

©The New York Times
Chicago — The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad — better known as the Rock Island — holds two unenviable records.

It has lost money for nine years in a row, and a proposal to save it by merger has been pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission for 11 years.

Things are looking somewhat brighter now, but only for the moment. Thanks to the 10% freight rate increase approved last week by the ICC, the Rock Island's chairman and chief executive, Theodore Desch, says, "Now we can meet all short-term needs at least through the end of the year."

Desch estimates that the rate increase will yield about $12 million in additional revenues to his system this year and about $24 million on an annual basis.

The Rock Island lost $15 million in 1973 on revenues of $329 million. It had another deficit of $9.3 million in the first quarter this year. Since 1965, the road's last profitable year, the collective loss has reached nearly $100 million.

Now that Desch thinks he can keep his 7,400-mile railroad — the 10th largest — out of bankruptcy for at least six more months, he also hopes the ICC will rule before the year end on the long-standing application of the Union Pacific Railroad to take over Acquisition of the Rock Island would give the UP Direct entry on its own tracks into Chicago. Since its formation more than a century ago, the UP's eastern terminal has been at Omaha.

The Rock Island's routes fan out in the mid-continent, south, west and north from Chicago. If the Union Pacific's application is approved, it proposes to sell the Rock Island lines that are south and southwest of Kansas City to the Southern Pacific Railroad.

When Desch first became an officer of the Rock Island in 1968, the Union Pacific merger bid was already more than five years old. Two more years followed before an administrative law judge for the ICC, Nathan Klitenc, began issuing a three-volume report recommending the merger, but subject to a host of conditions.

It took Klitenc three more years to complete detailing those conditions, which every party to the case — almost every railroad in the Midwest and West — has found unacceptable or unworkable. Now another year has gone by and finally the full commission is preparing a final decision.

Desch said he was confident that if the commission upheld the Union Pacific merger bid, on conditions that the Union Pacific finds acceptable, the UP would provide the financial support his road would need to survive while any court challenges are litigated.

A long list of opponents to a UP-RI consolidation undoubtedly was lengthened when two other roads broke off merger talks 10 days ago — the Burlington Northern and the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific. The Milwaukee probably would feel threatened by a UP-RI consolidation.

So far the most vigorous opposition to the planned merger has been raised by the Chicago & North Western Railway, which has wanted to merge with the Rock Island itself.

Just in case the ICC turns down the UP-RI merger or sets conditions not acceptable to the UP, Desch has had the Rock Island apply to the newly formed United States Railway Association for a $100 million loan. "And if we get it," the Rock Island executive said, "We'll spend every spend of it improving our roadway."

Even $100 million, he admitted, would not bring the Rock Island's plant up to the top flight maintenance level of the Union Pacific. But it would permit the Rock Island to eliminate the "slow" orders it has had to place on 3,500 miles of deteriorated track.

Canadian Wheat Crop No More Than Average

©The New York Times

Regina, Sask. — At a time when buyers all over the world are looking to Canada's prairies as a source of badly needed wheat, it now appears that — at best — this year's crop will be no better than average.

The reason is the weather. Heavy snowfalls, followed by delayed spring rains, have so heavily seeded that until quite recently the government marketing agency was predicting that this summer would produce a disappointing small harvest.

The situation has improved during the last week or so, but there is still little optimism in a year that many farm people had hoped would break records.

"If we have another week or 10 days like this, we could get up to around the level of last year's crop," said Otto E. Lang, the federal cabinet minister charged with wheat marketing.

Since wheat needs 100 days to grow here, and since killing frost in mid-September is not uncommon, farmers like to get it into the ground by June 1, and late May is the usual seeding time.

But this May there was more than twice as much rain here as usual — 3.7 inches compared with 1.5 inches — as well as severe flooding from melting snow, and an air traveler in Saskatchewan, which produces two-thirds of Canada's wheat, still sees hundreds of pools of water dotting the farm land.

As farmers waited for their land to get dry enough, only 25% of Manitoba wheatland was seeded by June 1 this year, and in Saskatchewan the percentage was about 50.

Some farmers have decided to plant less lucrative grains that can grow in a shorter season, and others, still waiting to plant wheat, will spend September praying for warm weather.

"It's a crying shame, it is," said one farmer. "We all thought this was going to be a great year."

Reflecting the increase in the international market price, the Canadian Wheat Board is paying farmers $4.79 a bushel for the best quality wheat, more than twice as much as they were getting a year ago.

With that incentive, the farmers had indicated plans to turn about 26 million acres over to wheat this year. That would have been higher than last year, but still well short of the acreages of the middle 1960s, before a market glut in 1970 scared thousands of farmers away from wheat.

Now, a spokesman for the Wheat Board has revised the estimate down to 22.6 million acres. At 26 bushels per acre, that would mean a Canadian crop in 1974 of between 500 million and 600 million bushels, compared with 628 million bushels last year.

Canada produces about one-third as much wheat as the United States does, but with only one-tenth the population, it exports four bushels out of every five. The Soviet Union and China get, between them, half the exported Canadian wheat.

JON KELLER . . . won a hybrid tea rose in the junior division.

'Chicago Peace' Is Winner At Rose Society Exhibition

Chicago Peace, grown by Ed A. Frerichs, won "Queen of the Show" Sunday in the Lincoln Rose Society 1974 annual rose show.

For the best hybrid tea rose, Frerichs won the Gold Certificate of the American Rose Society (ARS) and a traveling trophy presented by First Federal Savings and Loan Association.

First Federal sponsored the exhibition, held in the 135 N. Cotner branch.

Seward Man Wins
The Sweepstakes Award for the most blue ribbons was won by John Keller of Seward, who received the Dora A. Sienknecht Award, a traveling trophy in the horticultural stem specimen classes.

Rose Society members as well as other rose growers exhibited flowers ranging from tiny, delicate Asteroids to "Perfume Delight," the 1974 all-America award winner.

Non-member individual entries included arrangements such as Neptunes in simulated underwater growth amid sea shells, nets, wood, starfish and plants from the deep.

Roses And Onion
Another arrangement displayed Redgold and Mojave in long-stemmed onion coming out of a piece of gnarled wood.

In another unusual display, Mrs. S. S. Salac devised an inverted fruit tray as the base for a broken glass ladle extending up and out to hold a glass pie plate, from which the flowers rose.

The roses on display were a myriad of colors, some freshly picked Sunday morning from the Woods Park rose garden, 33rd & V.

Children Winners
Even the kids got into the act. Peggy Smith of 6740 S. Bermuda Dr won the Mini-Royalty Award for best arrangement by a junior. Miss Smith's "Man on the Moon" had Snowflake, Crimson Glory, White Masterpiece and Pascali extending from two half-moons and a "Man" made of rocks standing below holding an American flag.

First Federal's basement was a sea of single long-stemmed roses, waving chest-high in the challenge trophy classes, open only to Rose Society members.

The University of Nebraska horticulture and forestry department sponsored a display for show-goers, explaining what makes a good rose.

Special Award winners are:

©The New York Times

Chicago — The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad — better known as the Rock Island — holds two unenviable records.

It has lost money for nine years in a row, and a proposal to save it by merger has been pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission for 11 years.

Things are looking somewhat brighter now, but only for the moment. Thanks to the 10% freight rate increase approved last week by the ICC, the Rock Island's chairman and chief executive, Theodore Desch, says, "Now we can meet all short-term needs at least through the end of the year."

Desch estimates that the rate increase will yield about $12 million in additional revenues to his system this year and about $24 million on an annual basis.

The Rock Island lost $15 million in 1973 on revenues of $329 million. It had another deficit of $9.3 million in the first quarter this year. Since 1965, the road's last profitable year, the collective loss has reached nearly $100 million.

Now that Desch thinks he can keep his 7,400-mile railroad — the 10th largest — out of bankruptcy for at least six more months, he also hopes the ICC will rule before the year end on the long-standing application of the Union Pacific Railroad to take over Acquisition of the Rock Island would give the UP direct entry on its own tracks into Chicago. Since its formation more than a century ago, the UP's eastern terminal has been at Omaha.

The Rock Island's routes fan out in the mid-continent, south, west and north from Chicago. If the Union Pacific's application is approved, it proposes to sell the Rock Island lines that are south and southwest of Kansas City to the Southern Pacific Railroad.

When Desch first became an officer of the Rock Island in 1968, the Union Pacific merger bid was already more than five years old. Two more years followed before an administrative law judge for the ICC, Nathan Klitenic, began issuing a three-volume report recommending the merger, but subject to a host of conditions.

It took Klitenic three more years to complete detailing those conditions, which every party to the case — almost every railroad in the Midwest and West — has found unacceptable or unworkable. Now another year has gone by and finally the full commission is preparing a final decision.

Desch said he was confident that if the commission upheld the Union Pacific merger bid, on conditions that the Union Pacific finds acceptable, the UP would provide the financial support his road would need to survive while any court challenges are litigated.

A long list of opponents to a UP-RI consolidation undoubtedly was lengthened when two other roads broke off merger talks 10 days ago — the Burlington Northern and the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific. The Milwaukee probably would feel threatened by a UP-RI consolidation.

So far the most vigorous opposition to the planned merger has been raised by the Chicago & North Western Railway, which has wanted to merge with the Rock Island itself.

Just in case the ICC turns down the UP-RI merger or sets conditions not acceptable to the UP, Desch has had the Rock Island apply to the newly formed United States Railway Association for a $100 million loan. "And if we get it," the Rock Island executive said, "We'll spend every penny of it improving our roadway."

Even $100 million, he admitted, would not bring the Rock Island's plant up to the top flight maintenance level of the Union Pacific. But it would permit the Rock Island to eliminate the "slow" orders it has had to place on 3,500 miles of deteriorated track.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
